25 to 50 Reported Dead in Tornado

94 Maimed In Hospitals As Toll Rises At Amarillo

Residential Section In Texas City Swept By Twister; Many Homes Razed

Amarillo, Texas, May 15 (AP). A tornado struck savagely tonight at Amarillo.

The Amarillo Globe-News said an ambulance driver who had been taking casualties from the areas hit estimated from 25 to 50 persons had been killed.

The Globe-News said at 10:30 p. m. (CST) it knew of five deaths.

The twisting, destructive winds struck elsewhere in the Texas Panhandle where a bumper wheat crop is maturing. First reports from places other than Amarillo indicated damage elsewhere was light.

(The Borger News-Herald said a branch of the funeral home in Borger had been requested to send an embalmer and embalming fluid to Amarillo. Borger is about 40 miles northeast of Amarillo. The News-Herald said the funeral home estimated at least 20 were dead.)

The tornado hit hardest in the southern portion of the city, a section mostly of new homes occupied by veterans. Several thousand persons live in the general area.

The Texas highway patrol reported the tornado had destroyed several homes in a seven-block area.

The Globe-News said the winds had flattened homes around families and that those not caved in were badly damaged.

Captain Polk Ivy of the highway patrol said many injured had been taken to hospitals.

(The United Press said the first of the dead identified was Mrs. Lois Martin.

(At 11 p. m. there had been at least 94 persons admitted to St. Anthony's Hospital, Northwest Texas Hospital and the Amarillo Osteopathic Hospital. Reports showed 32 at St. Anthony's, 50 at Northwest and a dozen at the Osteopathic Institution, closest hospital to the wrecked district.

(Attendants said most were suffering from fractures and shock, but a dozen or more were critically hurt.)

The tornado was first reported to have hit Dalhart, in the northwest corner of the panhandle, but this proved false.

The U. S. helium plant near Amarillo, the panhandle's biggest city, was in the path of the tornado which hit three or four places in Amarillo. Communications with the plant were down and it could not be determined if it had been hit.

Telephone reports were vague and incomplete. There were unconfirmed reports of widespread damage and of numerous injuries.

Radio station KGNC in Amarillo reported it had received a request for all available doctors and nurses to report to Amarillo hospitals. The St. Louis red cross headquarters has been alerted for a possible disaster.

An official said the tornado tore up a large section of the south part of the town. It came in from the west and did extensive damage to an area about five miles out of the city. This is the general vicinity of the helium plant.

The tornado reach down next in the southernmost part of the city—that part that runs like the long middle finger and extends into Randall County.

The twister turned around then, following the contour of the city and headed northeast. There was some damage in the northeast part of the town. It was supposed to have hit the tri-state fairgrounds and damaged a recently completed bull barn.

A report from a traveler who came from Pampa to Amarillo said he saw cars wrecked and they looked like they had been blown off the highway.

Reporter Lon Adkin described a picture of confusion and hysteria in South Amarillo.

He said he walked into the area beside an ambulance. The ambulance hadn't gone far when a man ran from a house and shouted, "There are bodies in that house. Help me!"

He walked over concrete which he thought was a curb. Closer examination revealed it was a house foundation. Concrete blocks were strewn about the street.

The area was in complete darkness. Utility trucks were milling about as emergency crews tried to restore light.

At the edge of the area hundreds of cars were massed, stopped by officers. There the full impact of the tragedy was revealed by the actions of those living outside the tornado area.

"Let me in there. I have a home in there," some one demanded. Adkin heard cries of "My folks are in there. I've got to get in there and see about them. Get out of my way."

CLOSE UP—An estimated 5000 persons witnessed the tenth annual observance of "I Am an American Day" yesterday afternoon at the Capitol plaza. Among the thousands was a little girl who strayed away from her parents to get a closer view of the speakers. She got just as close as she could and then sat down to stare, not at Clara Belle, the clown, but at the principal speaker, Vice President Alben W. Barkley (right) and the honorary chairman, Attorney General Tom Clark. (Story and another picture on Page B-1)

Recess Seen For Congress In August

Leading Democrats Back Three-Month Rest to Escape Heat

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A three-month late summer recess, with Congress returning in November for another round on the President's program, was under consideration last night at the Capitol.

The plan already has important Democratic leadership backing, but hasn't yet received the formal blessing of the President.

The still tentative proposal calls for Congress to quit work about August 1, after clearing all appropriation bills and as many of Mr. Truman's "domestic" proposals as leaders can manage.

Congress would then either adjourn to "a day certain," probably November 1, or leave the return call subject to a later decision by the congressional leadership. This would avoid leaving a special session summons strictly up to the President.

The major purpose of the late fall session would be to implement the North Atlantic pact, which the Senate may or may not have ratified by November.

Once the Senate has approved the treaty, action by both Houses is necessary to pass the implementing bill, providing the controversial military aid appropriations.

Details of the late summer recess have not been worked out, but some thought was being given to the Senate continuing in session long enough to ratify the Atlantic pact, with the House recessing earlier, when it gets its chores done.

This would leave the fall session free to concentrate on implementation of the pact, as well as on loose ends of the domestic program. In the latter category may be anything Congress decides to do about taxes.

Leaders have already indicated no decisions on a tax bill will be reached until Congress has completed its appropriation record. Leading tax-makers on both sides of the Capitol want to further defer the decision until fall.

Factors that may influence an agreement to call time out in late summer and return in November were said to be:

1. The Capitol construction program, involving new roofs over both the House and Senate and other repairs to both chambers. While repairs are in progress, both bodies will have to find other quarters, and, some leaders think, might as well recess.

2. Taut tempers, which have already crackled prematurely this session, have been historically at their worst in Washington humidity. Recess proponents argue Con-

Cloudburst Hits

Nearby Area Blacked Out By Lightning

A man was struck by lightning and parts of the Arlington-Falls Church area were without electric power for 2½ hours yesterday afternoon as a violent electric storm broke over darkened streets and highways.

The lightning victim was Garth Viar, 20, of Route 4, Alexandria, Va., hit as he was attending a horse show at Meadowbrook in Rock Creek Park at East-West Highway. Viar was removed to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, where his condition was reported not serious. The bolt knocked off one of his riding boots and stunned a number of persons standing nearby. None of them suffered injury.

Thousands of Sunday strollers in city parks and at the Zoo dashed for cover as the low-hanging black clouds burst into a deluge. The mercury dropped from 76 at 5 p. m. to 61 at 5:55 p. m.

At the Zoo, buildings which normally are closed at 5:30 p. m. remained open to shelter part of the crowd of 38,000 visitors.

The power failure in northwest Arlington and Falls Church was caused by lightning striking a control transformer at the Idylwood substation of the Virginia Electric Power Co., a company spokesman said.

Two Arlington homes were hit by bolts. Papers in the attic of the home of C. F. Woodroe, 4909 North Washington blvd., were set afire when the lightning struck, but damage was negligible.

Another home struck was that of D. J. Leonard, 3600 14th st. N., Arlington. Damage here also was reported slight.

Lightning struck a WRC antenna 12 times between 5 and 6 p. m. without interrupting service, but at 6 p. m., lightning knocked out the telephone cable carrying WRC's

Wife Slayer Gets Night Out of Pen; 3d Found Dead

Kingstree, S. C., May 15 (U.P.)—Prison camp authorities let convict John McClary spend last night at home.

Today when he did not return from his furlough, officers went to his home and found the lifeless body of Alma Burgess McClary, his third wife, in a pool of blood from her slashed throat.

In 1937, McClary was sent to prison for killing his first wife with a shotgun.

In 1947, free again and remarried, he killed his second wife and her male companion with a pistol. He has been serving a 10-year sentence for manslaughter in their deaths.

Blasts Open War Among CIO Leaders

Labor Bill Sellout Charged by Leftists; 'Commie!' Is Retort

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

The bitter fight within the Congress of Industrial Organizations flared prematurely last night on the eve of a three-day meeting of CIO officials, starting today, with the circulation by left-wing groups of a confidential memorandum attacking the union's leaders.

Followers of CIO President Philip Murray struck a counterblow at the memorandum with the publication in the CIO News of a stinging attack on what was called "Commie yapping" at Murray and other union officials.

With CIO vice presidents scheduled to meet today, followed on Tuesday and Wednesday by board of directors sessions, leaders on both sides of the controversy predicted the sessions may end with a walkout by some of the leftist unions. The Murray faction is understood to have a substantial working majority both on the board and among the vice presidents.

The left-wing memorandum is understood to charge the CIO leadership with "selling out" by quietly agreeing to compromise amendments to the Administration's original bill calling for outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law. The Communists and leftist unions favor backing Representative Vito Marcantonio (R., N. Y.), who has demanded a return without any modifications to the Wagner Act.

The memorandum, its sponsors say, charges Murray and other CIO leaders with making "deals," holding secret meetings and engaging in an "undercover sellout."

The CIO News, official union publication, rallied to Murray's defense. In one article, Allan L. Swim, editor and CIO publicity director, wrote:

"During recent weeks the Commies have really been turning on the heat and it's obvious they got a lot of their fuel out of the gutter. Directly and by inference they have accused Murray and other top CIO leaders of incompetence, cowardice and treachery."

2 Boys Set Lumber Shed Afire To See 'How Flame Went Up'

Two 8-year-old boys who "had never seen a fire before and wanted to see how the flame went up" yesterday touched off a lumber yard shed blaze which caused an estimated $500 damage, police reported.

One of the boys, Georgie, made the mistake of becoming one of the crowd which gathered at the J. Frank Kelly, Inc., lumber yard at 2121 Georgia ave. nw.

Georgie's singed hair and eyebrows, noticed by Lieut. Robert N. Chenault of the Thirteenth Precinct who was looking over the crowd, led to the undoing of the pair.

The boys went to considerable effort to give themselves a show, and they almost got a real one. Firemen said if they had arrived about two minutes later than they did, the whole lumber yard—containing about $150,000 in building materials—might well have gone up in flames. The yard is just behind Griffith Stadium.

When Lieut. Chenault first spotted Georgie among the spectators, he asked the boy how he got his hair burned.

"I was home this morning, making toast in the oven, and it exploded," said Georgie.

Lieutenant Chenault took Georgie to the station house and let Precinct Detective Thomas E. Williams question him.

Williams estimated that he listened to about 50 different tales, all quite interesting, by the time Georgie had exhausted his imagination. He finally told the detective he and another 8-year-old, Johnnie, had set the fire, briefly outlining their desire to see how

Civil Service Drafts Wide Reform Plan

Bulk of 2,100,000 Federal Employes Affected by Program Soon Due in Congress

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Civil Service Commission is drafting a plan to reorganize itself and its activities—a revamping that would affect the great bulk of the 2,100,000 Federal workers.

The proposal is being written at the direction of the White House. The plan is to send it to Congress in a special message in about two weeks. It will carry as many of the Hoover Commission personnel recommendations as the White House and the commission believe it will be possible to adopt at this time. Some of the Hoover proposals will be modified in the reorganization plan.

These are among the points the revamping plan will carry:

1. A promotion and training plan which will be designed to reward supervisors and employes for doing a good job, and to train them for more responsible duties.

2. To give the Civil Service Commission the authority to coordinate the wage policies of the Government's local wage boards that fix the salaries of 600,000 per diem employes. The commission would fix the wage pattern of the boards, and organize joint boards in various cities to set the salaries of all per diem employes in those localities.

3. To streamline the present efficiency rating system in order to give the agencies the authority to set up and administer their own rating systems under Civil Service standards and review.

4. To extend the present decentralized hiring system to allow agencies to recruit, examine, and select their own employes under Civil Service standards. A provision that would limit competition in many tests also is under study.

5. To abandon the so-called "rule-of-three" in order to give Federal officials a wider choice in the selection of eligibles to fill middle and top bracket jobs. Officials would continue to be confined to the top three eligibles in the selection of clerical workers.

6. To provide a means under which incompetent employes could be fired speedily.

7. To provide higher salaries for the three Civil Service Commissioners, and to give the commission president additional authority over the agency's administrative policies.

NOTES: At VA, Minnie E. Pohe has been appointed assistant chief of the education and training division, and Ruth Boyer Scott is the newest appointee to the professional standards division. Both are registered nurses . . . The House Civil Service Committee today will hold hearings on the Murray bill to give agency heads the authority to suspend employes up to 30 days on the spot for reporting to work drunk, and similar violations of rules. Most employe unions will oppose the Administration-backed bill . . . The Frear Subcommittee of the Senate Civil

28 Prominent Citizens

Commission Created to Act In U. S. Public School Crisis

Formation of a National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools to meet the crisis in public education through community action was announced yesterday in New York City.

Financed by the Carnegie Corp. and the General Education Board, the group has a membership of 28 men and women, drawn primarily from the fields of business, labor, law and publishing. Headquarters is at 2 West 45th st., New York.

Roy E. Larsen, president of Time, Inc., and chairman of the commission, said the organization will "act as a clearing house to enable one group of laymen working for better public schools to benefit from the experience of others."

He said the commission plans to cite outstanding examples of community action for improvement of the schools.

The membership will be expanded to 60 persons, he said. All members will be American citizens, and not professionally identified with education, religion or politics.

The announcement said the commission was formed because of the concern of members with the urgency of problems facing the public schools.

Among problems listed were "lack of clarity in educational goals, shortage of trained teachers, overcrowded classrooms and the serious inequalities of educational opportunity for children in many parts of the country."

Larsen said that while professional educators, school boards, parent-teacher associations and other groups are working for better public schools, the problems concern all citizens.

Other officers of the commission are: James F. Brownlee, former deputy administrator of the OPA, vice chairman; John A. Stevenson, president of Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., treasurer, and Leo Perlis, director of the National CIO community services committee, secretary.

Other members are: Mrs. Barry Bingham, vice president, Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times; Stuart Bradley, member of executive board Louisiana Education Foundation, New Orleans; John Cowles, president, Minneapolis Star and Tribune; Edward R. Eastman, president and editor, American Agriculturist, Ithaca, N. Y.; George Gallup, director American Institute of Public Opinion; Mrs. Bruce Gould, editor Ladies Home Journal; Lester B. This Nation to Put Up Half

$125,000,000 Plans Drafted By U. S. for Backward Areas

By The Associated Press

The Administration is drawing up a 125-million-dollar program to develop the world's backward areas, Government officials disclosed yesterday.

The United States would contribute about half of this estimated sum if Congress approves. The rest is expected to come from wealthier members of the United Nations and countries that would be helped.

Specific projects, it is said, are being drafted by the American Government in response to President Truman's Inauguration Day call for a "bold new program" of general improvements in underdeveloped regions to combat human misery and aid world prosperity.

Under a tentative plan of action, the biggest share of funds would go to develop Latin American areas. Two other regions of the world—Asia and the Far East, and Africa and the Near East—would get almost as much, followed by Europe and its dependencies.

Most of this money, officials said, would be allocated for specific health programs in an effort to stamp out disease such as malaria which has retarded development of many natural resources in the past.

Projects designed to improve agriculture and forestry would rank next in importance. The third biggest task would be to try to improve native educational standards.

Government officials putting the final touches to the program said they plan to concentrate on these other fields also: reclamation, flood control, hydroelectric power, fisheries, exploitation of mineral resources, transportation and industry.

They said the Administration hopes that by laying out these long-range programs it can influence private American capital to invest its money in these areas and eventually raise the standards

Russians Call On Ex-Nazis For Big Vote

Soviet Aligns Itself With Nationalists in 'People's' Election

By Daniel De Luce

Berlin, May 15 (AP).—Russia allied herself with German nationalism today in a drive to impose Moscow's peace terms on the Western Powers.

Eastern Germany was urged by its Communist rulers to roll up a mammoth "yes" vote today and Monday for the so-called German People's Congress.

When the Big Four Foreign Ministers convene in Paris May 23, that congress will act as a German mouthpeace for Russia's demands.

Of the 18 million Germans in Soviet-occupied territory, the Communist front apparently expects at least 10 million to vote "yes." All former Nazi Party members, whose franchise was taken away by denazification commissions, have been invited by East German Communists to participate in the election.

Moscow's line for Germany, as exemplified in the congressional election propaganda, appeases several basic demands of German nationalism.

1. It proposes a final peace treaty

Russia Owes Iran Nearly 20 Million, Official Charges

Tehran, Iran, May 15 (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Ali Asghar Hekmet charged today that Russia owes Iran nearly 20 million dollars which she is making no effort to pay.

Hekmet said Irano-Soviet trade negotiations are deadlocked because "we cannot do business with the Soviet government as long as the Soviet press and radio continue their hostile campaign against Iran."

Itemizing alleged Russian debts, the foreign minister said Soviet authorities have failed to pay 10 million dollars in customs charges and more than one million dollars in railway charges.

GI Condemned to Die In Guam Rape Slaying

Announcement of the death penalty came shortly after the eight-man court indicated a conviction.

Reds Thrust To 8 Miles Of Shanghai

Two-Pronged Attack Threatens City and Escape Line to Sea

BULLETIN

Shanghai (Monday), May 16 (U.P.).—The Royal Air Force started an emergency evacuation of British subjects from Shanghai early today.

Shanghai, May 15 (U.P.).—Communist armies thrust within 8 miles of Shanghai today in a two-pronged drive aimed at the city itself and its escape route to the sea.

Another escape route narrowed as the two American airlines serving Shanghai announced they would suspend service Monday at the latest. British and Chinese airlines planned to continue at least temporarily.

The Shanghai garrison communique said Nationalist troops had retreated "according to schedule" from Huangtu and Nanhsiang—two rail towns, the first 15 miles and the second only 8 miles west of Shanghai.

(Canton, new seat of the Nationalist government, was declared in a state of war today by Gen. Yeh Shao, commander of the garrison, and there were signs of preparation for possible imminent departure.)

The official announcement reported also that three Red divisions, supported by strong artillery forces, had attacked government positions at Yanghang and Liuhang, about 8 miles west of the Woosung forts, main defense of the Shanghai sea route.

The semiofficial Central News Agency today quoted "competent military observers" to the effect that Shanghai may become just such a "death trap" for its attackers as Stalingrad was to the Nazi invaders of Russia in World War II.

Garrison authorities repeatedly have promised to fight to the last ditch to hold Shanghai, and with today's withdrawal, the city's defenders appeared to have reached the last ditch.

Many Shanghai residents doubt there will ever be heavy fighting in the city, because neither side wants to destroy the metropolis.

Eastman Cuts Prices On Cameras, Projectors

New York, May 15 (U.P.). — The Eastman Kodak Co. announced price reductions today averaging about 12½ per cent on a number of still and movie cameras and projectors.

The price cuts, which range up to 17½ per cent on some items, are effective immediately.

And Horizontal Rabbit

Izvestia Slaps at Biologist Who Deplores Vertical Man

Moscow, May 15 (U.P.).—The government newspaper Izvestia complained today against a Soviet biologist who held that man started on the downward path when he began to walk on his two legs.

This scientist, the paper said, is "an ignoramus."

The biologist, Izvestia said, really was a former pro-Czarist officer who had managed to worm his way into Soviet science circles.

S. D. Antipin, chief of the department of biology at the Kishinev Medical Institute, was the challenged scientist.

Izvestia said he had advanced this theory:

Man's greatest tragedy occurred when he ceased to walk on all fours and cut himself off from the animal world by assuming an erect position. If man had continued to walk horizontally, and rabbits had learned to walk vertically, many of the world's ills would not exist.

Boris Lavrenev, Izvestia writer, citing some choice Antipinisms, quoted, "Every four-legged animal excels man. Since man raised his head up he lost his sense of smell and by using artificial meat grinders instead of his own teeth he had weakened his chewing equipment."

Lavrenev said Antipin was especially displeased with the human mouth and fulminated against women's lips.

"No wonder many women paint their lips as if to say—see I'm human, not a monkey," Antipin said.

Lavrenev described Antipin as "an ordinary adventurer, crook and ignoramus, slavishly addicted to idiotic Morganistic (Morgan is one of the leaders of the Mendelian genetics school) ravings, having nothing in common with science."

Poles Claim U. S. Threat To Seize Eisler Ship

Fugitive Communist In Southampton Jail Says He's 'Kidnaped' By British Police

London, May 15 (AP).—The Polish Embassy charged today that the United States State Department threatened to seize the liner Batory unless her master surrendered the fugitive Communist Gerhart Eisler.

Eisler, held in Southampton jail after being carried off the Polish liner Saturday by four British policemen, himself issued a statement through the embassy declaring, "I am the first prisoner of the North Atlantic Pact."

The State Department in Washington said there would be no immediate comment on the Polish charges.

The 52-year-old Communist, who jumped $23,500 bail and stowed away on the Batory while two prison sentences were impending against him in the United States, charged that he had been "kidnaped" and his rights as a political refugee "brutally" violated.

Embassy Lodging Protest

The embassy, in a statement, said it took a serious view of the whole occurrence and was lodging a strong protest with the British Foreign Office Monday against what it regarded as a flagrant violation of Polish sovereignty.

The spokesman, who said the statement was issued after consultation with the Comunist-dominated Warsaw government, declared Poland was especially exercised at "the virtual commandeering of a Polish ship in British littoral (shoreline) waters."

At one stage of the eight hours of negotiation on board the vessel at Southampton the captain, Jan Cwiklinski, was virtually held prisoner on his own ship by Scotland Yard officers, the spokesman asserted.

Says Tender Was Tied to Ship

Albert Morski, counselor of the embassy, told a news conference that the British officers who boarded the Batory apparently feared members of the crew might interfere. He said Detective Inspector W. E. Bray of Scotland Yard warned that a British tender was tied to the Batory and was equipped with radio to call for assistance "instantly should it become necessary."

Jan Panski, chief of the Polish shipping mission in Britain, estimated that "about 40" British and American officials boarded the ship.

He said that at one stage Captain Cwiklinski and other Polish officers were told they must not

8 Policemen Shot In Sicilian Hunt For Bandit King

Palermo, Sicily, May 15 (AP).—Italian police hunting for Salvatore Giuliano, the bandit king, bumped into two separate bandit ambushes today and eight were wounded by machine gun slugs.

The policemen were among 5000 scouring Giuliano's mountain stronghold in western Sicily.

A police jeep ran into machine gun fire as it patrolled a road near Palermo. Two policemen were wounded, one critically. The bandits fled.

Reinforcements rushed to the spot to find the battle was over. On the way back to Palermo the police ran into another bandit ambush and six policemen were wounded. Again the bandits escaped—presumably without casualties.

Police were reported to have arrested 50 persons suspected of aiding Giuliano.

Senate to Take Up Reorganization Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

In accord with President Truman's request for speedy congressional action on reorganization, the Senate Administration leadership early this week will call up its measure to give the Chief Executive power to reorganize the Federal departments and agencies.

Legislation permitting the President to make sweeping changes in Federal agencies stems from the reports of the bipartisan Hoover Commission, which was created by Congress in 1947 and has just finished its study of the Federal Government.

Under the measure proposed by the Senate, the President can make recommendations to Congress regarding reorganization of the Federal Government. The proposals will become law and take effect within 60 days, unless in the meantime either house of Congress passes a resolution specifically disapproving the plan.

The Senate measure provides that no provision contained in a reorganization plan shall take effect unless the plan is transmitted to the Congress before April 1, 1953.

Already Passed by House

The House has already adopted a reorganization measure. The House added two major amendments to the measure, however.

New langauge was inserted prohibiting the establishment of any new executive department or designating any agency as a department, or its head as Secretary.

The House also adopted the so-called single-package amendment. This provides that certain Government departments must be reorganized separately and not in any over-all general reorganization plan.

Those singled out for special treatment by the House Committee on Executive Expenditures are National Military Establishment, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Interstate Commerce Commission and Securities and Exchange Commission.

Three Agencies Added

On the House floor the following agencies were added to the single-package amendment: Railroad Retirement Board, National Mediation Board and National Railroad Adjustment Board.

After the reorganization measure hits the Senate floor, the green light has been used for reconsideration of the vote which sent the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill back to committee for a 5 per cent over-all cut.

Other appropriation measures, including the Agriculture and the Civil Function bills, are scheduled to follow.

Next in line is the reciprocal Trade Act, but it is not expected to hit the floor this week.

Welfare Department Up

On the House side the most important legislation slated for consideration this week is the bill to establish a separate Department of Welfare. It would be constituted from the old Federal Security Agency.

Next will come the cigarette sales and use tax measure. Thursday both Houses will be in joint session to hear President Dutra of Brazil.

A bill to give salary increases to the heads and assistant heads of Government agencies will also be considered.

The National Housing Act is slated for House action this week, with Administration forces confident of a smashing victory.

Also on the House program are the Displaced Persons bill, the Federal Crop Insurance Act and REA loans for rural telephone service.

Rights Bills Changes Asked

By The Associated Press

Representative Hays (D., Ark.) will go before congressional committees this week in opposition to two of President Truman's civil rights proposals.

He said yesterday that he would offer alternative proposals to bills for poll tax repeal bill and a fair employment practices committee.

The first appearance is scheduled before the House Administration Committee Tuesday to oppose stafutory repeal of the poll tax.

Hays said he will urge acceptance of his plan to submit the question to the States in the form of a constitutional amendment.

On Thursday, Hays will go before a House Labor and Education Subcommittee now considering an FEPC bill which would confer power upon a Federal committee to prescribe nondiscriminating policies.

As a substitute for this measure, Hays said, he will ask the subcommittee to consider his proposal for the creation of a division within the Department of Labor to work toward nondiscrimination in employment by counseling.

Directors Named for Hoover Report Backers

NYHT News Service

Appointment of the board of directors of the Nation-wide citizens' group backing Hoover Commission recommendations to save billions by reorganizing the Federal Government was announced yesterday as Congress planned further action on the proposals this week.

Dr. Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University, Philadelphia, as chairman of the Citizens' Committee for Reorganization of the executive branch of the Government, announced the names of the members of the group's board of directors, including some of the most prominent men and women in the country.

The Senate this week will take up the measure granting the President the power to reorganize Federal departments, subject to congressional veto, which has been bogged down since February 7, when the House approved such a measure.

Some progress, however, has been made by direct legislative action in providing for reorganizing the Department of State and in other fields as recommended by the bipartisan congressionally-created commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover.

Dr. Johnson said the board represents major groups—agriculture, business, education, labor, the professions, veterans' and women's organizations—and added:

"Such unanimity is just about the most heartening thing that has ocurred in America in years. It indicates clearly that there is widespread realization of the need for resolute and vigorous support of our educational program in behalf of the Hoover Commission's recommendations for reforms."

The board members are:

Warren R. Austin, United States representative to the United Nations; Neal Dow Becker, chairman of the trustees of the National Industrial Conference Board; former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes; former Secretary of Commerce William L. Clayton,; William E. Cotter, general counsel, Union Carbide & Carbon Corp.; Dr. Colgate W. Darden, jr., president, University of Virginia.

Chester C. Davis, president, Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis; former Vice President Charles G. Dawes; Col. Franklin D'Olier, past national commander of the American Legion; General William J. Donovan, wartime commander of the OSS; Charles Edison, former Governor of New Jersey; former Postmaster General James A. Farley; Henry Ford 2d, president, the Ford Motor Co.; Clarence Francis, chairman of the board, General Foods Corp.; former Vice President John N. Garner; Albert S. Goss, master, the National Grange; William Green, president, the American Federation of Labor; former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John W. Bill Will Seek 3 Billion Cut in U. S. Spending

By The Associated Press

A bill to slice about three billion dollars off Federal operating funds is being drafted by some Democratic members of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Disclosing this yesterday, Senator Russell (D., Ga.) said it will propose this cutback in money Congress is expected to vote for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The aim is to avoid a huge deficit.

Only Saturday, congressional tax experts estimated that the Government will run three billion dollars in the red in the coming fiscal year, on the basis of proposed budget expenditures. This is $2,100,000,000 more than President Truman has estimated. The experts chose the higher deficit figure in anticipation of a revenue decline.

The three-billion-dollar spending cut bill was under preparation before the three-billion-dollar deficit measure was announced. Russell did not say whether studies of the tax experts had influenced the bill's economy goal.

Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) said the reduction move will have his wholehearted support.

As Russell outlined it, it would be his plan to let the appropriations bills go through the Senate in the regular way, without supporting the efforts Republicans have said they will make to enforce a 5 per cent cut in each.

The House already has passed all of the regular departmental money bills, but only one, the Treasury-Postoffice measure, thus far has cleared the Senate.

When the final bill arrives on the Senate floor, Russell said he may offer his reduction proposal as an amendment.

"I think we'll get substantial support for it," he said. "By then we will have a pretty good idea of what the revenues are going to be and we will know exactly what Congress has appropriated."

Armed Services Pay Measure Faces Stiff Battle in House

A multimillion dollar armed services pay raise bill was threatened yesterday with defeat in a congressional clamor for economy.

The bill, product of months of study by the House Armed Services Committee, comes to a vote in the House next week.

The possibility of adverse action on the bill was admitted by representative Kilday (D., Tex.), head of a subcommittee that drafted it and assigned him the job of piloting it through the House.

"We are likely, to have trouble getting it passed," Kilday told newsmen. "It comes up at a time when everyone is calling for economy in Federal spending. There are going to be objections because the larger raises go to high ranking officers, but the facts justify this action."

The Armed Services Committee approved the bill last Friday by unanimous vote, with Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) openly predicting that "it will be sniped at all along the line."

The estimated cost for the first full year of operation is 406 million dollars.

The bill affects all branches of the services, including the Army, the Navy, the Coast Guard, the Marine Corps, as well as the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service.

The proposed raises range from about 3 per cent for the next to lowest enlisted to almost 50 per cent for generals and admirals.

Partially offsetting the cost would be a savings of about 77 million dollars a year now paid to Army and Navy officers for sea and foreign duty and an estimated 191-million-dollar saving by dropping family allowances for enlisted men. These savings have been computed in estimating the net annual cost.

Recess Plan Studied on 'Hill'

gress will get more work done in the long run if members aren't exposed to "dog day" heat and irritations never fully cooled by the Capitol's air-conditioning system.

Architect of the Capitol David Lynn said yesterday that renovation of the now girder-braced roofs of the two chambers will begin about July 1 and probably continue through December.

Ohter repairs to the chambers "from the galleries down" will be deferred until next year's recess, Lynn said.

So after July 1, the Senate will have to do business in either the caucus room of the Senate Office Building or the more cramped old Supreme Court quarters in the Capitol. Best guess is, Senators will choose the caucus room.

Bombs in Barcelona Blast 3 Consulates

Madrid, May 15 (AP).—Bomb explosions damaged the Bolivian, Brazilian and Peruvian Consulates in Barcelona early today. Their embassies in Madrid immediately filed protests with the foreign office.

No one was hurt by the blasts. Barcelona police expressed belief the bombings resulted from activities of the three countries in the United Nations for a general return of foreign ambassadors to Madrid.

(This would indicate there still is active opposition to Generalissimo Francisco Franco's regime inside Spain, since Brazil, Bolivia and Peru, with Colombia, introduced the resolution now before the U. N. Assembly to relax the diplomatic restrictions imposed on Spain in 1946.)

The largest bomb apparently was the one at the Peruvian Consulate, where a large plate glass window was shattered.

Bolivian Consul General Jose Maria Pulgcerver said two men forced a janitor at pistol point to admit them to the Bolivian Consulate building. The two, he said, placed explosives before the door of the consulate on the third floor, rang the doorbell and ran.

Only slight damage was done at the Brazilian Consulate office in the same building.

French Price Rise Fastest In Europe

Geneva, Switzerland, May 15 (AP).—France experienced the most rapid inflation of all European countries during 1948, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe reported today.

Greece and Poland have suffered by far the highest degree of postwar inflation, however.

Wholesale prices in France rose by 33 per cent last year, and at the end of the year retail prices were 19 per cent above the prewar level. In Greece, retail prices were 256 times, and in Poland 133 times, the prewar level.

Italy's postwar inflation was the third highest in Europe, prices at the end of 1948 reaching a point 49 times above the 1938 level. Prices in Finland were eight times higher than before the war, in Spain and Hungary four times, in Czechoslovakia, Austria, Turkey and Belgium, three times.

Europe's lowest inflation was in Norway, Denmark, Sweden and Switzerland, with price increases ranging between 50 and 60 per cent above prewar levels. British prices were 82 per cent above the prewar level.

The commission said industrial production in the United States during 1948 was 35 per cent above that of all Europe, excluding Russia. In 1947, United States production exceeded Europe's by 51 per cent. In an average prewar year, United States industries produced only three fourths as much as Europe.

Shipbuilding, agriculture, textiles and cement production were the only spheres where Europe exceeded the United States in 1948. The greatest European lead was in shipbuilding. For every 100 vessels launched in Europe, 6 were launched in the United States.

Syria-Israel Parley Near Breakdown

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 15 (U.P.)—Deadlocked armistice talks between Syria and Israel verged on complete breakdown today when the Syrians refused to withdraw their troops to the Mishmar Hay Yarden line at the southern tip of Lake Hule in northern Palestine.

Both sides were reported to be increasing their border patrols in that region, and several minor incidents were reported.

Observers believed that only United Nations intervention could prevent a new outbreak of fighting.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Col. Moshe Perlman, Israeli military spokesman, said shipments of oil from Iraq were expected to be renewed at the end of this month under arrangements being worked out at Haifa.

Italy Warned On Fascists

Rome, May 15 (U.P.)—Premier Alcide de Gasperi said today Sardinian regional elections "showed a definite revival of the worst form of Fascism," and warned that the government will make every effort to stamp it out.

The openly Fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI) won 6 per cent of the vote and 3 of 60 seats in the regional assembly. With the Monarchists, they now hold the balance of power.

Speaking at a meeting attended by 2000 persons, De Gasperi said: "There wil be no revival of Fascism on a national scale, and we will remember that there is a law forbidding the apology of the old regime."

"Minister of Interior Mario Scelba, with cabinet approval, yesterday ordered police to arrest all MSI speakers or members who publicly support Fascism. He banned all MSI meetings where pro-Fascism had been revealed.

Gromyko Believes Americans Can Work With Reds

New York, May 15 (AP).—Andrei A. Gromyko, Russia's chief "No" man in the United Nations, said today "Americans and Russians can work together if they want to."

The No. 1 Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister's brief comment, was made to reporters just before he left by plane for Paris.

Asked if the agreement to end the Berlin blockade would lead to easing East-West tension, Gromyko replied: "The future will decide."

"We have to work for peace," he added. "Americans and Russians can work together if they want to."

Ammunition Train Blasted

Wolmirstedt, Germany, May 15 (U.P.)—Eighteen cars of a Russian ammunition train were destroyed by a mysterious blast near here last week, which caused heavy damage but no loss of life, German officials said today.

They denied West Berlin newspaper reports that the explosion Thursday killed several Soviet guards and German trainmen.

The train had been sidetracked near this Soviet-zone town to let a passenger train go through.

The explosion, just after the passenger train had passed, damaged several houses near the siding and ripped up about 500 yards of mainline track, the officials said.

The train was reportedly carrying ammunition for 88-mm. and 105-mm. antiaircraft guns.

Point 4 Declared No. 1 Hope for Peace

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman's Point Four offers more encouragement for world peace than any other proposal, even the Marshall Plan, Norris E. Dodd, United Nations food expert, believes.

Dodd has just returned from a three-month world-circling inspection of the agency he heads, the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization. He reports that Mr. Truman's "bold new program," outlined in his inaugural speech, for technical and scientific assistance to less advanced countries, has brought new hope to many areas.

"We in America," Dodd told The Washington Post yesterday, "fail to realize the extreme shortage of food in some areas and the terrible conditions under which some peoples live.

"Far more of the world's inhabitants go to bed hungry each night than with full bellies. There are millions that never have had what you and I call a square meal."

Scope of Trip

Most of Dodd's trip concerned southern Europe, the Near East, the Far East, the East Indies and the South Pacific.

He took part in the World Rice Conference in Bangkok, Siam, the Timber Conference for Asia and the Far East at Mysore, India, and the Indo-Pacific Fisheries Council at Singapore.

Agents of communism, Dodd asserted, are active in virtually every country he visited. Their activities plus the postwar unsettlement, are causing a ferment of unrest among millions in the low-standard areas.

"These preachers of other theories of government promise a better life, more food, more security, and a higher standard of living to these people crushed for centuries between exploitation, and illiteracy," he said.

"Its hard to answer these promises. These people have nothing now, they haven't got it from the democracies, and they are ignorant and uneducated."

No Definite Program

Dodd said that most western democracies, he feels, are anxious and sincere to help the areas under their control, but that no definite program exists.

"We've got to start with more food," he asserted. "It's nice to have an education; it's nice to have better homes; it's nice to have good clothes, but first, you've got to have full bellies.

"I don't think you can have peace while millions of people are cold and hungry and ill-clad. You can't write a peace treaty that will bring real peace until you have better conditions for these areas."

Point Four of President Truman's inaugural address, Dodd declared, wouldn't take much cash—practically nothing." But, he added, he believes it offers more for the good of the world than any other proposal, including the Marshall Plan. Resultant profits from trade with these countries would far exceed the cost, he said.

"A little know-how, or better, show-how, can do wonders," he said. "A great betterment in the diets of these areas could be accomplished just by showing these people how to store and handle the food they raise now.

Much of Food Lost

"There is as much food lost to insects, rodents and improper storage after harvest as enters the markets of the entire world."

Dodd, who was Undersecretary of Agriculture before taking the $30,000 tax-free job as director-general of FAO, operates a large ranch in Oregon, and is a recognized authority on modern farming methods.

He sees as one of the earliest accomplishments under Point Four the export of American experts in scientific agriculture, reclamation, irrigation, etc. A comparatively inexpensive contribution of this nature, the sending abroad of small missions, could show reaction in bettered conditions almost at once, he said.

"I have seen irrigation methods as old as history still in use," he commented—"where two to three men are needed with their home-made contrivances to irrigate an acre of land." On his Oregon ranch with modern methods, one man can irrigate 1000 acres.

"A sample pump taken to the banks of the Nile, to China, to the Euphrates Valley—the kind we see pumping out a flooded basement—could raise the dietary standards of one of those small communities in one season," he said.

Saw Shoeless Workers

"A small waterpower development with a small textile mill here and there would do wonders toward a better life in many areas. I have seen people who have never worn shoes—whose clothing consists of rags wound about them, trying to do a day's work."

The call, he says, is for technicians, experts in dairying, in livestock raising, in forestry, in soil conservation, drainage, irrigation, but mainly in extension work—to carry the know-how on down to the individual producer.

FAO now is conducting such a service to a limited extent. "But we are merely a consultative agency," Dodd explains. "At that, we have requests for five times as many technological missions as we have funds for.

"Every country I visited asked for such experts. We are furnishing some on a part-time basis. Some we pay for; other missions are paid for in the countries they serve.

"The American colleges have given tremendous assistance, lending us their experts. Western European counties are willing, I know, to join. They are aiding FAO now.

Higher living standards, Dodd insists, will in their own way help solve the problem of a greater population than there is food enough to feed.

"In the areas," he said, "where all the work is by hand, another child is an asset. As soon as they are able to walk, they are put to work to help feed the family. The greatest increases in population are taking place in areas where food production is already the least sufficient, and where famine is not always staved off from harvest to harvest."

Local governments, Dodd said in every case "are really trying to improve living conditions. Here and there, there are bright spots." He mentioned Siam as one.

"If we don't give more, or at least as much as the other guy promises," he declared, "we'll find these people working in his army.

"We're living on top of a powder keg. There is no middle ground—no easy way out."

McCarran to Inquire Into Eisler's Escape

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) yesterday criticized the Justice Department for the escape of Communist Leader Gerhart Eisler from this country and announced that his Immigration Subcommittee would investigate the case.

McCarran told a reporter:

"It seems to me that the Department of Justice, with all its vast machinery for gathering information about subversive aliens, should have known the whereabouts of a man like Eisler every hour of the day and night."

Poles Accuse U. S. of Threat

leave the cabin in which they were gathered, and plainsclothmen blocked the door.

The treatment of Eisler which the crew might have resented, Panski added, included "bumping" him on the floor and dragging him to a companionway.

It was during the conference, Morski said, that a statement from the United States State Department was read which threatened seizure of the Batory should she ever return to American waters if Eisler was not surrendered.

The embassy statement said other measures were threatened "which implied the closing of the Gdynia-American Line in the U. S. A." The line owns the Batory.

It said the measures taken by British police "deprived the captain, his officers and representatives of the Polish government of their freedom of movement and made it impossible for the captain to carry out the order of the Polish government to leave British waters without surrendering Eisler."

The statement declared the British had violated "internationally accepted principles of law and order and human rights."

It said the warrant for Eisler's arrest alleged a breach of American visa regulations and invoked the Anglo-American extradition treaty, but alleged no crime within the jurisdiction of British courts.

Eisler, the statement added, was a political refugee entitled under international law to an asylum and protection under the Polish sovereign flag" and the British had no right to interfere on a foreign vessel in British waters unless peace and order outside the ship were disturbed.

On the other hand, a British Foreign Office official said the Batory was in British waters and therefore it was "within our jurisdiction and within our competence" to arrest Eisler on extradition charges. He said the courts would decide whether he is to be extradited.

Eisler, in his own statement, said "I am being kidnapped by the British authorities by force and violence, acting as gendarmes for American reaction, from a Polish boat."

Declaring "I am a political refugee, an Anti-Nazi German," He said he had been kept in the United States against his will.

"The British authorities, for the sake of the Un-American Activities Committee, have brutally violated the old British tradition of Asylum for political emigres, fighting for freedom and progress," he asserted.

He thus touched on a tradition of which the British are very proud. During Hitler's rule the British admitted thousands of political refuges from Germany and German-occupied lands. Since the war they have extended asylum to other thousands from Communist-ruled countries, as has the United States. At one time Lenin was a refugee in London from Czarist Russia, while Trotsky was a refugee in New York from the Czar.

Eisler concluded that he would continue "my fight from the British prison for my right to return home."

(Although the statement was distributed by the Polish Embassy, Richard Yaffee, a special correspondent for Columbia Broadcasting System aboard the Batory, reported he found it in two envelopes which he picked off the floor of Eisler's cabin after the Communist had been removed from the ship.)

Whole Cellblock to Himself

Meanwhile, Eisler had a whole block of 23 cells to himself in Southampton jail. He was allowed the normal privilege of sending out for his meals but chose to eat from the policemen's canteen.

Police said he was behaving quietly.

He is to appear in a Southampton Magistrate's Court at 11 a. m. (5 a. m., Eastern Standard Time) tomorrow for a hearing when application will be made to take him before London's Bow Street Magistrates Court The Bow Street court is the only one in England with power to deal with extradition requests.

The British Council for German Democracy said tonight it had engaged Stanley Moore, a London solicitor, to represent Eisler.

Miss Dorothy Diamond, assistant secretary for the council, said the organization was formed during the war to encourage antifascism in Germany.

"We are interested in Eisler, not as a Communist but as an anti-Nazi German refugee," she said. "We are a completely nonparty organization."

Embassy Counselor Morski said Poland's view is that Eisler set out on the Batory as a stowaway but "regularized" his status as a passenger by paying his fare to Gdynia. He said this was the accepted practice among shipping lines.

He said Poland had a treaty with the United States for the extradition of "criminals."

Yard Insists He Is German

"Eisler told us he is an Austrian, but Scotland Yard insisted he is a German," Morski related. "We have not cleared that point, and it is not vital."

In defending himself against contempt of Congress charges in 1947, Eisler told a jury he was born in Germany of Austrian parents

He was sentenced to a year in prison for refusing to testify before the Un-American Activities Committee unless permitted first to read a statement.

His wife is still being held on Ellis Island in New York. She was arrested Friday and questioned about her husband's flight. She had been at liberty while under a charge of being in the United States illegally.

and quick withdrawal of all occupation troops.

2. It supports the unification of Germany.

3. It hints Russia, after having taken as much as 10 million dollars in booty and reparations from the eastern zone, is prepared now to have all victor powers renounce further reparations claims.

New Russian Deal Hinted

4. It also hints Russia is ready to make a deal with a nationalist Germany which will restore the Germans as the strongest nation in western Europe.

In the Western sense, the election in eastern Berlin and the Soviet zone of Germany is not an election and the People's Congress is not a congress.

The ballots have only a single list of candidates, of which at least 60 per cent were chosen by the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party and affiliated "mass organizations." The remainder were handpicked from non-Communist splinter parties, which have had to cooperate with the Communists for four years under direct Russian pressure.

Number on List Varies

This statement is printed in bold type on the ballots:

"I am for the unity of Germany and a just peace treaty.

"I therefore vote for the following list of candidates for the third German People's Congress."

Beneath is a list of about 90 names, the number varying from district to district. The congress is supposed to have 2000 members in all. Under the list is the word "yes" at the left of a circle. A second circle is at the bottom with the word "no" at the right.

Some election officials are known to have been instructed officially to count as "yes" all ballots which are left blank or are completely scratched out.

Banned in Western Zones

The Western Allies have banned the People's Congress election in the areas they occupy. Communist committees, however, are selecting 500 delegates who will claim to represent western Germany.

The Soviet-licensed German news agency ADN reported "quick and frictionless" voting in eastern provinces today.

In Berlin, 511 Communist sympathizers gathered in the former German air force headquarters in the Soviet sector and elected 60 congressmen by a show of hands to "represent two million western Berliners.

Budapest, May 15 (U.P.).—Government officials said tonight that more than 90 per cent of the Hungarian electorate voted today in the one-ticket national parliamentary election.

First returns gave the People's Front, the only ticket offered the voters, 34,725 votes out of 36,300 cast. Of the remainder, 1224 votes were cast against the ticket and 351 were invalid.

Huddle Called To Boost AF Bomb Defense

By the United Press

The Air Force, worried about meeting attacks by future enemy superbombers of the B-36 type, has called aviation industry officials to a conference here Friday to plan new fighter and radar defenses, it was learned yesterday.

High-ranking officers said the conferees will discuss the whole field of air defense—design of fast-climbing interceptor planes, radar warning systems, communications, and anti-aircraft.

These officers said the meeting is not extraordinary. But it coincides with recent disclosures concerning the problem of detecting and shooting down a B-36 type bomber flying well above 40,000 feet.

These disclosures were based not only upon tests of the B-36 against operational Air Force jet fighters like the F-80 Shooting Star and the F-84 Thunderjet, but against the F-86 Sabre, holder of the world's speed record. Groups of F-86's are being formed.

The Air Force fighter development program since the war has been aimed at achieving best performance at 30,000 to 35,000 feet. But the B-36 has pushed air war to more than 40,000 feet. Air Force planners now are reported to be pressing urgently for interceptors that can perform effectively as high as 50,000 feet.

The Air Force-industry conference will consider the military requirements for defending this country against attacks from altitudes double those flown in World War II.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff, at the same time, have been discussing a Navy proposal that its best operational jet fighters be thrown against Air Force B-36s to test Navy radar and interceptor capabilities.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's office indicated no decision has been reached whether to stage such tests.

While the Navy proposal was for a test of its own air defenses, it also was in the nature of a challenge to Air Force claims for the superbomber.

Navy officers believe they could intercept the superbombers with their F2H Banshees, ship-based fighters which climb to 40,000 feet in seven minutes after take-off, and fly well over 400 miles an hour when they get there.

Balloons Urged To Take Message Of U. S. to Soviet

By The Associated Press

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) yesterday said the Japanese wartime balloon trick could be used to get messages of friendship over the Iron Curtain to the Russian people.

"The prevailing winds into Russia are such that free balloons can be set loose in central Europe and western Europe and will be carried across the Russian territory with appropriate mechanical release of documents," Flanders said.

Speaking in a radio interview with Charles Parmer (WPIK), Flanders said he is "terribly concerned about our lack of sufficient willingness to appropriate for means of getting in touch with the Russian people." There are dozens of ways to do it besides using the Voice of America Radio, the Senator said.

Flanders has advocated in the Senate the use of guided missiles or remote control plans to shower peace messages to the Russians.

Senate Committee to Get Bill For Revising Elections Today

By Chalmers Roberts
Post Reporter

The proposed Lodge-Gossett constitutional amendment to change the presidential election system is expected to come before the Senate Judiciary Committee today for what may be its do-or-die appearance at this session of Congress.

Senator Bert H. Miller (D., Idaho), chairman of the two-man subcommittee which has been considering the amendment for months, expects to report it today, perhaps favorably, perhaps without recommendation. He would not say for certain yesterday just what his stand will be.

A move is then expected by one of the amendment's supporters for immediate full committee approval.

"I'd like to see it discussed on the Senate floor," Miller told The Washington Post. He gave two reasons: "I'm uncertain about it myself," and "I don't want any charge we blocked it in committee."

The amendment would abolish the present electoral college. It would divide each State electoral votes in proportion to the popular vote case in that state for each candidate, ending the present winner-take-all system of electoral vote blocs.

Major stumbling block so far in the Senate has been the one-man opposition of Basil Brewer, publisher of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard-Times. Brewer, who has repeatedly bucked the amendment's sponsor, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) in the political field, has stirred up considerable opposition. His chief convert has been Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), a Judiciary Committee member.

Unless the amendment clears the committee quickly, it is likely to be log-jammed on the already crowded Senate calendar. It suffered this fate in the 80th Congress and had to start all over again in the 81st.

On the House side, the amendment has cleared the Judiciary Committee and its sponsor, Representative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.) expects the Rules Committee within a week or 10 days to send it to the floor for a vote.

Strike Is Termed 'Political' by Ford

Detroit, Mich., May 15 (U.P.).—The strike paralyzing the Ford Motor Co. is "political" and not economic, Henry Ford, 2d, charged today.

In a telegram to Cyrus Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, the company president pledged co-operation should the Government intervene in its dispute with the United Automobile Workers (CIO).

Walter Reuther, president of the UAW, appealed for Government intervention yesterday. Ching was expected to enter the dispute early this week, perhaps Monday, when the last Ford assembly plant closes, bringing the total of strike-idled Ford workers to 106,000.

"This is a political strike and not an economic strike," Ford wired Ching in reply to a telegram Ching sent both sides Thursday asking a speedy settlement. Thousands of families, the motor magnate added, were "victims of political crosscurrents in certain factions of the UAW-CIO."

"If the leadership of this unwarranted strike had concentrated as much on finding a way of pulling their political hot potatoes out of the fire, this strike would have been ended long since and perhaps would never have started," Ford said.

Another company statement charged the union with seeking "feather-bedding" of production schedules. To this, the union issued this reply late today: "The Ford workers are not asking that they be allowed to work less than 100 per cent of standard. They are demanding that they not be forced to work more than 100 per cent of standard."

Ford and union negotiators resume their talks Monday but with practically no hope of getting anywhere without outside aid. In announcing his bid for Federal intervention, Reuther said a settlement was no nearer than when the strike began on May 5.

Reuther's request came as a surprise to company officials. He announced that he had asked the Government to step in after new settlement plans offered by both sides were rejected yesterday.

Blasts Open Battle in CIO

tion noted that Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), had indorsed the Administration labor bill, rather than the move to return to the act he wrote in 1935.

Initial skirmishes will be fought today at the meeting of CIO vice presidents, whose most recent clear-cut, left-versus-right vote came at the Portland, Oreg., convention when 33 members favored supporting President Truman for election. Eleven left-wing unions opposed the indorsement, most of them favoring backing of Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party candidacy.

The Murray faction is expected to offer today resolutions condemning Donald Henderson, president of the Food, Tobacco, Agriculture and Allied Workers of America, for attending the Red-flavored World Peace Conference in Paris. A second resolution will seek approval of the CIO withdrawal from the World Federation of Trade Unions, also Communist-dominated.

CIO leaders are understood to feel that any condemnation of Henderson might drive him in anger out of the organization.

Also, passage of the resolution favoring withdrawal from the WFTU is almost certain to provoke at the least a bitter exchange between, Harry Bridges, president of the leftish International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Bridges To Be Invited Out?

There was considerable speculation over whether Murray might invite Bridges to take his union out of the CIO if he persists in a defiance of a decision by the latter to shun the WFTU.

The right-wing faction also is expected to introduce and pass a resolution calling for indorsement of the Atlantic Pact and another supporting the Administration labor bill.

A leader in the left-wing fight, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, plans to start the interunion row by demanding that the United Steelworkers of America, which Murray also heads, pay $100,000 damages to Maurice E. Travis, secretary-treasurer of the Mine and Mill Workers, which charges that Murray union men helped beat up Travis April 20 at Bessemer, Ala. They say Travis has lost the sight of one eye and may become totally blind.

Tunnel Is Reopened

New York, May 15 (AP).—The blast-scarred New York-bound tube of the Holland Tunnel was reopened to motor traffic today. The two-mile tube was seared by fire and blasts Friday after a truck, loaded with a cargo of carbon disulphide, exploded in the eastbound shaft.

Relative Questioned In Man's Stab Death

James (Pete) Lowe, 26, of near Germantown, Md., a landscaper, was found stabbed to death yesterday on Route 240 about 3½ miles north of Gaithersburg, in Montgomery County.

County police in Rockville were questioning a brother-in-law, Clifford Yokley, 30, who lives near where Lowe was found.

Neighbors said Lowe had been mistreating his wife, Fern, for several months and that the brother-in-law had reproved Lowe yesterday.

Police said they had been called to a "family argument" in the field near the Yokley home. When police arrived, they found Lowe dead, stabbed through the heart, lying beside the road.

The body was removed to the E. C. Gartner funeral home in Gaithersburg, where Dr. F. J. Broschart, county medical examiner, performed an autopsy. Death was caused by a stab wound in the right ventricle of the heart, Dr. Broschart said. The stab wound was made with a long, wide knife, he said. Police late yesterday evening were searching for the weapon.

Lowe was employed by his uncle, Gilbert Lowe, of Gaithersburg, in landscaping work, neighbors said. Yokley also is a landscaper, employed by Lawrence Hawkins of Gaithersburg.

Woman Slain; Reminded Man Of Dead Wife

St. Louis, Mo., May 15 (U.P.).—A customer at Mrs. Elva Burrow's restaurant killed her because she reminded him of his dead wife, police said today.

He then killed himself with a revolver he had taken from his roommate, a policeman.

Mrs. Burrow, 24, gasped out the story to police last night shortly before she died of a bullet wound inflicted by Martin W. Doersam, 60.

Doersam, a steady customer, kept telling Mrs. Burrow he hated her because she looked like his wife who died three months ago. Last night Mrs. Burrow waited on him, then answered a telephone call. When she left the telephone booth, Doersam shot her.

$500 Fire Set By Two Boys

the flame went up, according to Williams.

Georgie and Johnny, who was then picked up, told the whole story, according to police. They had found a box of safety matches, which inspired them to walk seven blocks to the lumber yard, scale a 7-foot wooden fence, and get to work.

After a vain attempt to light a piece of wood against the shed, they found a can with some fluid in it.

"Johnnie threw some of that in the building stuff in the shed," said Georgie. "He put a match to it, but it didn't burn.

"Then I put a match to it, and it did burn.

"Johnnie ran like hell and went over the fence. I tried to stomp the fire out and got burned, then I ran out close behind and went over the fence."

Georgie stuck around to see the show but Johnnie ran home.

The boys were released in the custody of their parents pending action by juvenile authorities.

Medical Test Report Due in Slaying Today

Roanoke, Va., May 15 (AP)—Police probing the church slaying of pretty Dana Marie Weaver pin their hopes for a major development on a report from the State's chief medical examiner, expected Monday.

The report will tell what, if any, evidence was turned up in examination of the stained trousers found in the closet of 16-year-old Lee Scott, the murder suspect.

It also will tell, police hope, whether Dana Marie was smothered with a coffee urn bag found near the church, and whether any clews to her slayer were turned up in scrapings from beneath her broken fingernails.

While the medical examiner, Dr. Herbert S. Breyfogle, prepared his report, police here still sought a possible motive for the crime.

Since Scott was charged with the slaying Tuesday night, police have been questioning classmates of both the boy and Dana Marie at Jefferson High School.

Young Scott, a choir boy at Christ Episcopal Church, where Dana Marie's beaten body was found last Monday, was still in jail without bond tonight.

Police said he admitted to them in an all-day quizzing Tuesday that he was in the church with Dana Marie shortly before the slaying. But he did not sign a confession, they said.

Bank Earnings Gain, Profits Show Drop

By the United Press

Gross earnings by the Nation's 13,419 insured commercial banks hit a $3,404,000,000 peak last year but their net profit dropped off to 745 million dollars, it was announced yesterday.

Chairman Maple T. Harl, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., reported that the banks, despite the profit drop, increased their payments of dividends and interest to 331 million dollars. This was accomplished by an 11 per cent cutback in the amount reserved for expanding capital accounts.

Harl said that gross operating income, up 10 per cent over last year, exceeded expenses by a record $1,240,000,000 but that tax payments of 495 million dollars cut the profit figure to 745 million dollars. This was a 5 per cent drop during the year and was about one fifth below the peak figure of 1945.

The "unequaled" gross earnings, he said, resulted in large measure from a record $1,600,000,000 income on loans which were roughly 25 per cent above those of 1947. Interest and dividends on outstanding securities totalled $1,198,000,000, a slight drop from the previous year, while service charges on deposit accounts made up 174 million dollars of the total.

Total operating expenses were $2,164,000,000, a 9 per cent increase during the year.

Wage and salary payments rose 10 per cent to $1,045,000,000, a result of both increased employment and higher pay scales. Harl said the average bank official was paid $5726 last year while the average employe received $2301.

Interest on time and savings deposits aggregated 317 million dollars, an increase of 6 per cent.

Dr. John Grebe To Address Chemical Club

Dr. Grebe

Dr. John J. Grebe, chief technical adviser to the Army Chemical Corps, will speak here Monday night before a meeting of the Chemical Engineers Club of Washington.

Following a dinner in his honor, the meeting will be held at 8 p. m. in the Officers Club of the Naval Gun Factory. His subject will be "The Role of the Chemical Industry in Warfare."

Dr. Grebe, on leave from the Dow Chemical Co., Midland, Mich., was appointed to the advisory post last fall. His was the first of two assignments allotted the Chemical Corps under congressional authorization to provide the armed services with 45 civilian posts in professional and scientific fields at annual salaries of $10,000 to $15,000.

Born in the German Rhineland in 1900, Dr. Grebe came to this country in 1914 and was graduated from the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio. In 1935, he was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree there, the youngest man to receive that honor.

He is the author of many publications, and holds more than 60 patents in electrochemistry, power generation, organic synthesis and air conditioning. He served as a consultant to the Chemical Corps and to the Office of the Rubber Director in World War II, and later was an observer at the Bikini atom bomb tests.

President of the Chemical Engineers Club of Washington is John T. Cox, jr., deputy director of Rubber Reserve Corp. George Armistead, jr., consulting chemical engineer, is in charge of the Monday night program.

Willkie's Widow, Son Hurt in Auto Accident

Cambridge, Ohio, May 15 (AP).—Mrs. Edith W. Willkie, 58, of Rushville, Ind., widow of Wendell L. Willkie, and her son, Phillip, 29, were injured in an automobile accident 22 miles east of here today.

Father Sees Son, Girl Companion Die in Air Crash

East Alton, N. H., May 15 (U.P.).—A former Air Force flier and his 19-year-old girl friend were killed before his father's eyes today.

His rented plane crashed into Lake Winnipesaukee when he "buzzed" his parents' summer cottage before landing for a visit.

Richard G. White, 26, died with Miss Geraldine French, both of New Castle, N. H.

The two-seater monoplane brushed lakeside treetops that stripped off the wings and flipped the craft into the water only 50 feet from the cottage of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold B. White.

The father had stepped outside the cottage to wave to his son when he heard the plane overhead.

The Eisler Case

The furor over the arrest of Gerhart Eisler on the Polish liner Batory off Southampton is merely a symptom of the tense relations that still exist between the two sides of the iron curtain. Actually there is only one unusual feature of the case—the fact that Eisler was a stowaway. But, of course, that does not minimize the right of the United States to have him arrested and returned to this country to pay the penalties for the offenses of which he has been convicted.

Eisler's claim that he was "kidnaped" is an effort to squeeze the last ounce of propaganda value out of the incident. The facts are that Scotland Yard arrested him at the request of our Department of Justice transmitted to the British government. Under our extradition treaty with Great Britain arrests of this sort are routine. The treaty clearly covers perjury, one of the offenses of which Eisler was convicted. Nor is there anything unusual about the fact that he was taken from a Polish liner. Every nation has the right to inspect ships in its territorial waters when there is reason to suspect that a criminal is evading justice.

The irregular factor in the case is the attempt of the Polish authorities to protect a fugitive from American justice. Decent regard for law and for good relations demands that every country hand over persons lawfully convicted of crime to the country in which the crime was committed. But the Communist regime in Warsaw appears to be interested only in rewarding Eisler for his illegal activities in the United States and in shielding him because of the subversive work he could be expected to do in Germany or elsewhere. The fuss that the Polish authorities are making over the incident goes a long way toward confirming the belief of American officials that Eisler was the kingpin in the Communist conspiracy in this country.

Comedy Of Errors

An attempt to write a revenue bill for the District on the Senate floor ended in unutterable confusion. Opponents of the sales tax, led by its most redoubtable and loquacious foe, Senator Johnston of South Carolina, tried to make good their boast that the needed revenue could be obtained by increasing the Federal contribution and raising real estate, income and liquor taxes. The proposal to boost the Federal contribution to more than twice the present figure was defeated as well as another amendment offered by Senator Johnston to increase the realty tax 25 cents per $100 valuation instead of 15 cents as recommended. The Senate then proceeded to approve his proposal to double liquor gallonage taxes in lieu of the 50 per cent increase recommended by the Senate District Committee. And finally it accepted the Johnston amendment to extend the District income tax with present exemptions, a broadened coverage and nearly doubled tax rates.

Nobody, least of all Senator Johnston, knows just how much additional revenue would be produced by the substitute proposals. The Senator from South Carolina said he had been informed that his income tax amendment would bring in close to 12 millions dollars and increase returns from this source by nearly eight million. Other estimates put the additional revenue at 15 million, and Mr. Johnston himself changed his estimates from time to time, finally confessing that nobody knew what the revenue return would be. Senator Humphrey brought the debate over these estimates to a bewildering climax by asserting that the Johnston amendments, together with the tax increases left in the mangled committee bill, would yield over 21 million—more than three million in excess of the amount needed to balance the budget and increase District employes' salaries.

The scatterbrained way in which the Senate has acted to destroy the carefully worked out committee measure tailored to fit the District's financial needs would be a diverting exhibition if the situation were not so serious. The Senators could not even agree as to whether a vote for the Johnston income tax proposal had or had not killed the sales tax. Finally they called it a day, and recessed with a motion to reconsider the income tax amendment pending. If that motion—the first order of business on today's calendar—carries, the way will be open for a test vote determining the fate of the sales tax.

It would be futile at this juncture to repeat familiar arguments for and against a District sales tax. The Post has explained many times why it favors this levy as an alternative to other forms of taxation under present conditions. Moreover, the House has approved it, and would not take kindly to the alternative proposals voted last week by the Senate. As Senator McGrath said, the revenue bill has been written in committee after expert study and due consideration of the complicated problems involved. By trying to write amendments from the floor the Senate destroyed this carefully designed pattern and produced only a comedy of errors. Its performance is a sharp reminder, if any were needed, of the inability of Congress properly to handle complicated local issues.

High Commissioner

Pending the appointment of the American High Commissioner for Germany, the powers of this responsible office are under review, especially its relations with ECA. Under the dispensation to be set up after the liquidation of Allied military rule Germany would not be wholly sovereign. Certain reserve powers would be held by the three or four power civilian High Commission (depending upon the outcome of the May 23 Foreign Ministers Conference) till the conclusion of a peace treaty. The aim in the meantime would be to expedite political and economic recovery in Germany within a security framework. One instrument for this purpose will be ECA funds. In the circumstances the question has arisen as to whether the American High Commissioner should be ECA administrator as well.

In our opinion the case is clear against divided authority in Germany, though there must be no misunderstanding as to the master role of ECA and the State Department in Germany's external relations. Germany is in a special category. This was recognized in the act setting up the ECA—in the clause authorizing the President to "make appropriate administration arrangements for the conduct of operations" in respect of Germany. No period may be more significant for the future of Europe than the period of the High Commission. It will be a period both delicate and perilous. Accordingly the Office of the High Commissioner should have ample power for expressing American policy—power that should not be risked by inviting intra-American conflict within Germany. To illustrate: the sort of friction that marked the relations between Ambassador McVeagh and Administrator Griswold in Greece is the kind that must be avoided. Indeed the need for unhampered supervision to be placed in the hands of the High Commissioner is even greater in the case of Germany than in that of Greece. For in Germany the security hazard must always be in mind. The High Commissioner requires the authority of the purse strings as well as the authority of his office in seeing that security and other measures are carried out. In short, he should be ECA administrator as well as High Commissioner.

This does not necessarily mean that the High Commissioner should be expected to do the actual work of ECA administration. This could be done by a high-ranking deputy. Nor that the High Commissioner should be independent of ECA in the matter of integrating the economy of Germany with that of Europe. In the making of policy on Germany's interrelations the High Commissioner must be subordinate. For it is in this respect that issues could arise in the absence of a clear understanding. As a case in point, the long wrangle in the Clay regime over the outlet for German exports as between Rotterdam and Hamburg may be recalled. No organization, of course, can be perfect, and in the final analysis harmony will depend both on personalities and on a like-minded approach to solutions in terms of European consolidation. Conflict would be inevitable if the High Commissioner so far forgot his role as a supervisor as to identify himself with German nationalism.

It would indeed be tragic if the august responsibility as High Commissioner were given to any appointee who is not in full sympathy with the development of what Mr. Hoffman calls the "organization of Europe." Indeed, this sympathy, in our view, should be the prime qualification for the post, for the hub of economic integration happens to be located in Germany, viz, the Ruhr.

Welcome For Dutra

Preparations are in progress to welcome President Eurico Gaspar Dutra of Brazil to Washington Wednesday, including all the formalities that have attended visits of other chiefs of state. There is special reason why this welcome should be a warm one. President Dutra is the representative of a great and good neighbor, traditionally the best and most cooperative friend the United States has had in this hemisphere. His visit will be the first of a Brazilian chief executive to this country for 73 years—since the time Emperor Dom Pedro II visited the centennial exposition in Philadelphia in 1876 and reputedly became entranced with Alexander Graham Bell's new gadget, the telephone. It is therefore a unique occasion.

Apart from the great nation he represents, President Dutra himself has much to commend him to American hearts. Mild mannered, he is something of an anomaly among army generals, for he was brought up in the military profession and yet remained civilian-minded. He is the person whose task it has been to restore constitutional government and liberties to Brazil after the heavy-handed Vargas regime. It is a measure of his caliber that he has met economic and political crises with wholly constitutional means, with the result that democratic processes in Brazil now have a firm foothold.

Although President Dutra's visit is described as having no political implications, inescapably it will have significance in connection with Point IV. For Brazil has immense interest in economic development, especially in such areas as the great Sao Francisco valley. Moreover, Brazil has commendably enunciated the need for self-help in Latin America. It is appropriate that President Dutra's nine-day stay should include a tour of the TVA.

Plans call for President Truman and his party to meet President Dutra at the National Airport Wednesday afternoon. There the procession will cross the Memorial Bridge, go down Constitution ave. to Fourth st., then up Pennsylvania ave. to Post Square, where Commissioner John Russell Young will present General Dutra with the key to the city. Fire trucks with banners, some 15 bands, veterans' color guards, military units, Boy and Girl Scouts will be on hand, and 50,000 miniature Brazilian flags will be distributed to spectators as the gift of the Brazilian government.

It is to be hoped that the stores along the parade route will join in the spirit of the occasion with proper decorations. But the real welcome will be spontaneous—not only in appreciation for the magnificent welcome the Brazilians gave President Truman at Rio de Janeiro in 1947, but also in affirmation of the Nation's regard for a stanch friend. The slogan ought to be the Portuguese "Bem vindo (beng veendo) Presidente Dutra."

The CED View

In a report dealing with Federal taxation and expenditure policies the Committee for Economic Development declares that there "seems to be no limit to the projects pressing for an expenditure of Federal funds." The President's program including a tentative estimate for military aid to western Europe calls for an expenditure in excess of 46 billion dollars in the next fiscal year—a sum equivalent to one fifth of the national income and nearly 10 billion higher than actual expenditures in 1948. The estimates relate to the consolidated cash budget, which shows the total income and outgo of the Government, inclusive of trust account operations, which are excluded from the regular administrative budget. This method of presentation of budget data is preferred by the CED because, obviously, it provides the basis for determining the effect of Federal taxation and Federal expenditures on the general economy.

The CED report warns that this rapid rise in Government costs will, unless checked, carry us beyond the 50-billion mark within the next few years. It asks two very pertinent questions, therefore, that increasingly engage the attention of legislators, economists and the man on the street: (1) whether we can "afford to expand Government activities so rapidly and on so many fronts at once; and (2) whether we are reaching the margin where the economic and social costs of such activities outweigh the benefits. The framers of the report conclude that if the Government "continues to expand so fast and in so many directions at once, we will suffer damaging consequences to private economic effort and individual freedom of action." There is much evidence, they think, to show that we are already "in or near the danger zone."

On principle the CED holds that a permanent increase in Government expenditures should be met with an increase in tax rates sufficient to provide for debt reduction during periods of high employment. But it believes that a tax increase would be risky at the present time where there has been a "substantial softening" of the business boom. However, to obtain a moderate cash surplus on the basis of existing taxes, assuming continued high employment, expenditures must be held down. The CED's experts point to the Hoover Commission's findings as evidence that large amounts can be saved by reorganization and more efficient operation of the Government, and they further emphasize the importance of achieving a reduction in outlays through postponement or curtailment of low-priority spending programs.

One of the most valuable sections of the report is the one dealing with proposals for establishing more effective control over expenditures. Congress is not equipped at present to do an intelligent job of expenditure paring. The Hoover Commission has recommended introduction of the so-called performance budget—a reform recommended by the CED—that would enable both Congress and the public at large to gain a better understanding of the purposes for which money is being spent and the costs of individual projects.

Given executive budget reforms of this kind, appropriation bills would be more informative and Congress would not be bewildered by a multiplicity of meaningless items that preclude discriminating cuts in expenditures. Among other proposals indorsed by the CED is one long urged by Senator Byrd providing for consolidation of all appropriations bills into a single omnibus measure. For new long-range spending programs the CED also recommends spelling out not merely their initial but their expected future costs.

Reforms of this kind cannot be achieved overnight. So the problem now confronting Congress: how to reduce Government costs in the coming fiscal year without impairment of essential functions or repudiation of moral and legal commitments, remains perplexing. But the report offers sound advice for future guidance, and we hope it will give impetus to the movement to establish tighter control over Government spending.

"Unfair Punishment"

Your May 9 editorial "Unfair Punishment" condemning United States District Judge Hutcheson for fining four Gloucester County, Va., school officials for their failure to comply with his order giving them four months to equalize educational facilities for Negro and white children in the Gloucester County schools, is vulnerable on strictly legal as well as on moral grounds.

Judge Hutcheson was merely following the United States Supreme Court which in 1948 laid down the principle that the State cannot delay equal educational opportunity. In the case of Sipuel University of Oklahoma (332 U. S. 631) a Negro girl had demanded admission to the University of Oklahoma Law School because the State of Oklahoma had not provided her with a comparable Negro law school.

On January 12, 1948, the Supreme Court ruled the State of Oklahoma had to provide Miss Sipuel with a legal education just as soon as it provided a legal education for any other applicant. That gave the State three days to set up a separate Negro law school or admit Miss Sipuel to the University of Oklahoma Law School. Judge Hutcheson gave the Gloucester County officials four months to equalize educational facilities in their county.

On moral grounds your editorial is bad because it makes a double standard of official conduct. You did not contend the Gloucester County officials had equalized Negro and white educational opportunities. You did not even argue the officials had done their utmost to achieve equality. You merely stated they had done something.

Your editorial implies that Judge Hutcheson's action will deter citizens from accepting a public school system. That is not true for conscientious officials who do their utmost to achieve equality, because best effort is all that any court would or could require. Judge Hutcheson fined the Gloucester County officials for knowingly doing less than their best.

As long as prejudiced public school officials can ignore the Constitution and deny Negro children equal education with impunity, they will put forth little effort to equalize educational opportunity; but when they realize they risk their personal assets and possibly their liberty in ignoring the constitution requirement of equal protection of the law, they will find ways and means of producing the equality of education which the Constitution requires.

Federal Salary Lag

As Congress considers the Reclassification Act, these facts stand out as of interest to the Government worker in Washington, D. C.: (1) A Government worker who made $5400 per year on August 15, 1939, now receives $7192, an increase of 33.1 per cent. (2) The consumer's price index for moderate-income families (Monthly Labor Review—April, 1949, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics), increased from 98.6 on August 15, 1939, to 164.1 on February 15, 1949, an increase of 65.5 per cent.

(3) The average annual salary of all Government workers is now $2976. (4) The average weekly salary of all Government workers is now $57.23.

(5) The average weekly salary of all iron and steel workers is $61.01; electrical machinery workers, $57.47; machinery workers, except electrical, $61.41; transportation workers, $62.65; automobile plant workers, $68.10; nonferrous metal workers, $58.48; paper and allied product workers, $55.70; printing, publishing, etc., workers, $66.51; chemical workers, $57.89; coal and petroleum products workers, $72.18; rubber products workers, $56.93; coal mining, anthracite, $67.11; coal mining, bituminous, $75.61; metal mining workers, $65.46.

(6) The average Government worker who now makes $57.23 per week made $44.63 per week in 1939. Were his weekly salary to be raised in accordance with the rise in the cost of living since 1939, he would receive $73.86.

This is a little less than the wage of a bituminous coal miner ($75.61 per week). REALIST.

Danger In The Pact

Does the North Atlantic Pact promote the cause of world peace and democracy? According to official sources, "democracies cannot plan for war." If this is the case, how can we explain the invasion of Indonesia by the Netherlands. This is a direct violation of the spirit of the pact and associates imperialism with all signatories.

Will the signatories of the pact give military aid priority over Marshall Plan aid? The basic need facing European democracies is economic, not military. If military aid is given priority, European economic recovery will be greatly hampered.

Will the pact precipitate an armaments race? The rearming of Europe can have only one effect upon the world community—it will accelerate the trend toward an all-out armaments race.

The pact, as proposed, does not carry a connotation of world law and order, nor is it a security arrangement against aggression, or a solution to the prevention of a future war. Peace in the world community demands world government to maintain law and order among nations.

Train to Berlin

Your coverage of the lifting of the Berlin blockade was most thorough, not only with Wes Gallagher's AP story, but with your own staffers' reports, those by Al Lewis and Mary Van Renssalaer Thayer.

But it was remarkable in that Mrs. Thayer achieved a near miracle. She reported the "beautiful countryside and valleys among the Hartz Mountain foothills. The fields were meticulously plowed in patchwork strips of varicolored grain and vivid yellow rape seed blossoms. . . . Kerchiefed women flailed the henna soil in rows."

Gallagher's report said that the train left Marienborn just before 2 a.m. (Berlin time) and arrived in Berlin at 5:08 a. m.

Now, unless the northern European summer day has lengthened considerably since I was there in 1945, it should have been quite dark, at least dark enough to keep ordinary eyes from distinguishing "vivid yellow" and "henna." Also, the Germans apparently are even more industrious than we thought, if they are flailing in the wee small hours. Maybe Mrs. Thayer eats carrots?

High Railroad Rates

The chief handicap to railroad progress is the regulation of railroad freight rates and passenger fares by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The same disastrous conditions that prevailed before and during the depression of the 1930s as a consequence of the very great rate and fare increases of 1920 will soon come back as a result of the high railroad rates and fares of today, with the railroads almost helpless to act because of the great expense and delay necessary in securing the Interstate Commerce Commission's approval for quick reductions.

To prevent disaster, it would be very helpful to the railroads if the Interstate Commerce Commission could be relieved of the responsibility of supervising all railroad rate and fare changes, allowing the railroads by their own managements to increase or reduce their charges as the meeting of competition from outside transportation agencies required. This would enable them to retain the travel and traffic they were able to handle during the late war period to the great benefit of the whole country. LEO B. FRISCH.

"Tea Relations"

May I suggest to Helen Kildahl (letter printed May 11) that British tea cum sugar and milk is as odd a drink as vintage champagne served with the same additions?

A good tea is a work of art—holy! May I suggest to Hayden Talbot (letter printed May 11) that even in these war years the tea used at the Chinese Embassy is a dream of delight?

My practice in Washington is to ask for weak tea, sip it hopefully, and if it is a holy tea, enjoy it with thanksgiving; if it is the usual mixture of chlorine and "orange-pekoe," to add milk and turn it into British tea or American tea, neither of which is tea.

Russian tea is good, with lemon. Arab tea with mint is delicious. Ski tea with rum hits the spot. But no one who has had the joy of really good Chinese or Japanese tea ever considers that the hyphenated versions are tea. TRAVELER.

Government "Drones"

On May 10, Senator Douglas joined the conservative "economizers" in a cry against Government spending. The Washington Post quoted him as saying "Our first job is to fry the extra fat out of our departments and agencies" and drop the "drones."

As a Government employe I can testify that his suggestion has much merit and am heartily in favor of it. However, the Senator should have really made his suggestion worth while by figuring out how to do that job. Anyone who thinks that merely cutting an appropriation will give you economy is remarkably naive because the ones who will suffer are the people at large and competent Government employes, not the "drones" and "fat."

The deadwood, who usually draw down top salaries, are almost invariably political appointees with support either in Congress or the Administration, more often the former. The deadwood survives reduction in force, downgradings, gets new jobs if the old agency folds up, and supervisors wouldn't dare give any of them a low efficiency rating or try to fire them. There is a perpetual game among Government supervisors of trying to pass them off on unsuspecting fellow chiefs.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The King Is Dead

New York City.

THERE IS MUCH more than meets the eye in Franklin Roosevelt's fight for the late Sol Bloom's congressional seat here in New York. Roosevelt's great name, his ebullient personality, and his rampageous campaigning, have focused attention upon him personally. But the real point at issue is not the future of young Roosevelt. It is the future of the Democratic Party in New York.

This is a ding-dong fight. And just to give the fight extra interest, Roosevelt's only serious opponent, Judge Benjamin Shalleck, has just been indorsed on behalf of President Truman by Senator J. Howard McGrath, in his capacity as chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

Judge Shalleck is the "regular" Democratic candidate. What "regular" means in this instance can be summed up in one word—Tammany. Judge Shalleck is in fact a nervously respectable front for the Hall's present top man, Borough President Hugo Rogers, and his ally, Francis X. Mancuso, the great chieftain of the Tammany cavedwellers. Rogers and Mancuso have superseded the lesser Tammany leaders of the Twentieth District. They are directing their forces in person, and have imported into the Twentieth District hundreds of Tammany workers from all over Manhattan.

The Rogers-Mancuso friendships also bear significantly on this special election. They were among the most eminent guests at the famous Copacabana dinner party given by that remarkable expert in slot-machine jackpots, the refined Frankie Costello. Costello admirers, who have prospered on the East Side, will vote for Shalleck.

IF THIS IS not enough, Rogers and Mancuso have a cosy relationship with Representative Vito Marcantonio, head man of the Communist-front American Labor Party. The A. L. P. has put a grim-visaged female candidate, Dr. Annette Rubinstein, into the race to take votes from Roosevelt. If need be, a generous helping of A. L. P. votes is likely to be transferred direct to Shalleck.

If Rogers and Mancuso win by these means, their kind of politics will be permanently fastened, like a particularly nasty albatross, around the neck of the Democratic Party in New York. But if they lose, most observers agree Rogers will have to step down as Tammany chieftain. Then the Hall's battered old guard will have to admit defeat at last.

What makes the McGrath indorsement of Shalleck even more remarkable is the character of young Roosevelt's team. In Robert Blaikie, leader of the Seventh Assembly District, he has support from the kind of organization Democrat who dimly understands the political future. Then the Liberal Party is powerfully behind him, and so are the unions, like David Dubinsky's Ladies' Garment Workers. The unions are supplying both workers and sinews of war. Finally, under the leadership of Louis Harris and Michael Levine, Americans for Democratic Action are making a major contribution to the fight. Scores of young A. D. A. members are working full time, doing everything from writing speeches to ringing doorbells.

Altogether, if President Truman really means what he says about wanting to transform the Democratic Party into a progressive party, he will find the men to help him here in the Twentieth District. But he will find them working all-out to defeat the man whom his national committee chairman has just indorsed.

THE OSTENSIBLE, and probably the real reason of the McGrath indorsement of Shalleck, was the need to do the "regular" thing. But the very fact that the President's official political strategist could thus ignore all the new currents in American politics, is the best symptom of what is happening to the Truman Administration.

Possibly the personal element entered in. For a few months after President Roosevelt's death, President Truman had a habit of telephoning Mrs. Roosevelt to ask "what he would have done," almost as though he were consulting a medium. But that era could not last. Nowadays close associations with the President's great predecessor do not recommend either men or policies at the White House. And no doubt the fact that the young Roosevelts took the wrong tack at Philadelphia is also remembered.

More important still, however, is something deeper and less personal. The signs are a bit obscure. One such is the fact that the best stick the President's conservative cronies possess, with which to beat his leftwing advisers, is the tag of 'New Deal crackpot." Another is the known White House dislike for anyone closely associated with A. D. A. Another is the President's pointed failure to name progressive Democrats to important posts.

The truth is that Truman talks progressive but does not like progressives in the flesh. This is the real explanation of most of the oddities of his political leadership.

Today And Tomorrow

The Arms Bill

THE RELATION between the pact and the arms bill which is troubling Congress will be greatly affected, and one may hope clarified, by what happens at the Council of Foreign Ministers. There is strong support for the pact and the Senate can ratify it during the early weeks of the Paris meeting.

But the arms bill and particularly the appropriations, cannot pass until the end of June at the earliest. By that time the Soviet government will have shown its hand in Paris. And so Congress as it considers the arms bill, will know fairly well whether the danger of military aggression against western Europe is waxing or waning.

AS A matter of fact, the arms bill itself bears little relation to the original conception or to what has been generally said about it. A billion dollars is a trifling amount of money, even as a first installment, if the purpose of the arms bill is to create forces in western Europe to contain the Red army.

All that the arms bill actually contemplates is the supply of sufficient equipment out of the American surplus to bring the existing forces in western Europe, which are extremely small, up to a reasonable military standard. A modern armored division costs about 250 million dollars, and so, if the whole sum were used in western Europe alone, it could not begin to produce a force capable of playing a decisive part in a war. All that the arms bill can do is to arm better the forces which are now almost unarmed.

That is well worth doing, indeed important to do, but not for the reasons usually given, not for the reasons which have left Congress so unconvinced. The real value of creating somewhat better armies in west Europe is that they will give a feeling of security against internal aggression and a sense of confidence in dealing with the revival of Germany. They are related to the Russian military problem only indirectly—only in the sense that they remove any temptation by Russia to intervene in case of internal disorder.

THAT temptation will exist as long as there is on the Elbe River a Red army larger than any that western Europe has, or can in the foreseeable future hope to create. It is here that the deliberations in Paris will become so significant to the arms bill.

If the Soviet government is really prepared to negotiate agreements about Germany which make it possible to reduce the occupation forces, and to fix a timetable for their withdrawal, then it will be manifest that the arming of western Europe is a matter of internal security and of being prepared for the revival of Germany.

If, on the other hand, the Soviet government is intransigent and aggressive in Paris and determined to expand rather than to contract its military position in Europe, then it will be manifest that the arms bill is quite inadequate, and that it should at once be enlarged and speeded up. For then it will be necessary to concentrate our efforts on giving Europe immediately the means of resistance. That will call for a radical revision of our own strategical plans and our military program.

IN EITHER event the arms bill and the Paris meeting are now intimately connected. It was not planned that way, of course, but what is developing may be better than what was planned. For Mr. Acheson's hand will be strengthened in Paris if it transpires that the scale and tempo of European rearmament are related to the sincerity and reasonableness of the Soviet proposals.

He will be playing a stronger hand if, with the pact ratified, the arms bill becomes a function of the agreements that are being negotiated—if in substance, satisfactory agreements mean a very modest rearmament, if no agreements mean more rapid and larger armaments.

THERE ought not to be any doubt that an arms bill is going to be passed at this session. For an arms bill is in any event necessary, desirable and, in truth, an indispensable token of our own good faith. But the scale and tempo of the rearmament can be treated flexibly, and made to depend upon what the Soviet government shows to be its real and present intentions in Europe.

broadcast from the studios in the Translux Building out to the AM transmitter in Prince Georges County.

The day was saved, however, by Engineer Harold Gates, who fed his FM receiver into the transmitter immediately after the line break. The FM broadcasts, transmitted from the Wardman Park Hotel, were not affected by the lightning, and broadcasts went on as usual as far as the listeners were concerned.

Streets were virtually blacked out as the storm clouds, extending southeast from Rockville to Baltimore, put an ominous blanket over the area.

Despite the city gloom, street lights could not be turned on to alleviate the condition because a schedule, set by act of Congress, prescribes the lights should be put on yesterday at 8:29 p. m., a spokesman for the Potomac Electric Power Co. said. Switches are set to turn on the lights precisely at this time.

The teeming rain, blown by gusts of wind that reached a peak of 41 miles an hour, occassionally beat in almost horizontal lines against the windshields of Sunday motorists crawling slowly homeward on slippery roads.

Harbor police reported that the darkening clouds had appartnetly given boatmen sufficient warning, for no incidents had been reported up to 6:15 p. m. A number of motorboats, some towing canoes, were spotted racing for cover with the first blast of wind and rain.

About 2000 telephones in the Anacostia section were put out of order for a while when floods made about 1300 breaks in one cable.

Electric current was cut off for nearly an hour in about 500 homes near Wisconsin ave. between Rockville and Bethesda when power feeders were hit by lightning.

Streets Flooded

Streets were reported flooded in various sections of the city—among them the area surrounding the Capitol, the intersections of Pennsylvania and Constitution avs. nw. and the 4400 block of Georgia av. nw.

The Metropolitan Police radio was put out of commission for a few seconds when a generator failed. An emergency generator at the 10th Precinct station went into action automatically and service was restored.

The storm brought the Silver Spring automobile show, scheduled to wind up at 11 p. m., to a premature end.

Side canvasses were blown from exhibition tents and television equipment was damaged. Sightseers ran for cover in nearby stores and in the Baltimore & Ohio Railway station.

The temperature before the storm had hit a high of 84 at 2:48 p. m. Low for the day had been 60 at 6:48 a. m.

The humidity reached a high of 89 at 5:30 a. m. and a low of 44 at 3:30 p. m. During the storm it rose to 71.

The storm ended at 7:43 p. m. when the last thunder was registered by the Weather Bureau.

of living, in cooperation with the local governments.

If the plan goes through Congress, officials say, the Administration plans to present the program to the United Nations in order to weld the work it is doing in the field into one giant, coordinated program.

It would reserve the right to channel some of the projects into nonmembers of the United Nations, such as Italy. The State Department plans to conclude two-way agreements with the home governments in such cases.

The present plan is for the United States and such countries as Canada, Britain and France to contribute about 75 million dollars. The nations to be assisted would be expected to contribute about 50 million dollars more in local currencies on a project-by-project basis.

Express Men Accept Board's Settlement

New York, May 15 (AP).—Railway Express Agency workers have agreed to accept recommendations of a special presidential fact-finding board for settlement of their dispute with the company.

Daniel J. Sullivan, district general chairman of the AFL Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, said last night local and national leaders of the union would meet with Railway Express Agency officials within a week to put the recommendations into contract form.

U.S. Schools Found Improving, But Quality Still Falls Short

Chicago, May 15 (U.P.).—The Nation's public schools have achieved "encouraging progress" in the last 10 years, the Council of State Governments said today, but it warned that many children still are receiving below-standard education.

The council said expenditure of $7,595,129,000 for building needs alone is required in the next five years to bring the schools up to par.

In the first comprehensive study ever made of the school systems of the 48 States, the council concluded that "improvements of great import" are promised by the "present high tide of interest in education."

The 256-page survey, called for by the Governors' Conference last year, said this public interest has resulted in these achievements in the past 10 years:

1. Per-pupil expenditure up from a median of $82 to $178—adjusted to prices, a 28 per cent increase.

2. Percentage of State aid raised from 30 per cent to 40 per cent, the local ratio dropping from 63 to 53 per cent.

3. Teachers' salaries rose from an average of $1093 to $2440, or, adjusted to prices, from $1093 to $1448.

But the council added that "serious deficiencies and problems" yet remain, among them:

1. "Low-quality" instruction is the lot of many children, particularly in rural areas.

2. Most States face a shortage of qualified teachers and "few are making satisfactory progress towards overcoming it."

3. At least 298,895 new classrooms will be needed in the next five years.

The report emphasized that an underlying factor, affecting all phases of education, is the need for school district reorganization.

Districts Found Too Small

Of this controversial subject, the report said the great majority of nearly 100,000 local school districts in America are smaller than they should be for efficiency and economy of operations.

The greatest efficiency, the report said, is possible in districts which enroll at least 1200 pupils, provide both elementary and high schools and employ 40 or more teachers.

Less than 4 per cent of the 100,000 districts employed that many teachers and the one-teacher school, in a number of States, exists in 75 per cent of the school districts.

While the average salary for teaches increased, when the total is considered, the report showed that those in five States earned less money in 1947-48 than they did 3 years before, allowing for price differences—New York, down 10.1 per cent; California, 6.6; Connecticut, 0.4; Florida, 0.8; and New Jersey, 7.4.

A Communication

Questioning Privileges In Congress Hearings

By Arthur V. Watkins

(U. S. Senator from Utah)

IN YOUR May 11 issue you published an editorial, "Privileges and Rights," The thesis of that editorial was that privileges of questioning witnesses appearing before congressional committees cannot be extended to all 96 members of the Senate and to all 435 members of the House.

Then you state:

"Indeed, the privilege—and it is distinctly a privilege, not a right—is easily susceptible of abuse. Senators Watkins and Donnell have abused it by taking up approximately two thirds of the hearings with their own lengthy questioning of witnesses. Their behavior, in fact, is likely to discourage future extension of this courtesy, and Senator Watkins, who walked out huffily on the Atlantic Pact hearings on Monday, is not likely to win much sympathy."

Apparently you base your criticism on a statement made by Senator Connally, chairman of the committee, that we had used more than two thirds of the time of the committee in our examination of the witnesses.

SENATOR Connally was in error when he made this statement. Obviously, no one held a stop watch on the time used by the various Senators. The only way to determine how much time had been used is to check the number of pages in the transcript of the hearings. Such a check shows that, contrary to the statement of Senator Connally, Senator Donnell and myself had used 455 pages out of a total of 1234, or 36.8 per cent of all pages used in the transcript up to the time I left the hearings on May 9. I used 157 pages, or 12.7 per cent of all pages used.

There were 1046 pages used in the cross-examination of witnesses by members of the committee and by Senator Donnell and myself. Of this Senator Donnell and myself used 455 pages, or 43.4 per cent. I personally used 157 pages, or 15 per cent of all pages in the transcript used for questioning of witnesses. That record certainly does not justify your criticism.

The record also shows that not all of the 13 members of the Foreign Relations Committee attended the sessions. It further discloses that only a limited number asked any questions of the witnesses.

This is in keeping with a rather anomalous situation which is a matter of public record that all members of the Foreign Relations Committee were committed to the Atlantic Pact even before the hearings began. Naturally they have very few questions to ask of public officials such as the Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense, General Bradley, and others because they are in full accord with what has been said. As a rule only Senators who are critical of the treaty would attempt to cross-examine the witnesses at any length. There were exceptions, of course.

AS A practical matter, 95 Senators would never be present at a committee hearing. That many are seldom present in the Senate, even on very important votes. It is also notorious that only a few members of committees attend hearings. The present hearing has been no exception.

Your statement that nonmembers of congressional committees cannot be settled here. tion witnesses before committees cannot be settled here. However, let me point out that the Reorganization Act does not forbid it, nor do the standing rules of the Senate. Furthermore, it is a long standing custom for committees to recognize nonmembers to sit with them and question witnesses at great length. After all, the committees are only agencies to aid the Senate in expediting its work.

There are numerous precedents, even with the Foreign Relations Committee, of which Senator Connally is chairman. When the United Nations Charter was before the committee in 1945, Senator Milliken of Colorado, although not a member of the committee sat with it and asked numerous questions. He rendered a great service in bringing out matters in connection with the charter that members of the committee would not otherwise have done.

When the so-called Mexican Treaty involving the waters of the Colorado River was before the Foreign Relations Committee, practically all the questions propounded in a long drawn-out hearing were by nonmembers of the committee. Not the slightest question or objection was taken to their presence or their right to interrogate witnesses. Senator Connally was the chairman at that time.

New Recital Of Folk Songs Offered Here

By Richard Keith

Frances Lehnerts, mezzo-soprano, assisted by David Garvey at the piano, gave a recital of American songs last evening at the National Gallery. It was the third in the gallery's current series of six concerts devoted to American music.

Miss Lehnerts is a singer of extraordinary ability. Her voice is rich and warm, with plenty of resonance and power. She has a flair for the dramatic, both in her singing and in her appearance, which should suit her well to an operatic career. Her beautifully controlled manner of handling soft endings is remarkable.

In contrast to her excellent singing of the program, its general level of musical value was lower than it should have been. Of course there is little that can be done when it comes to 18th and 19th century American music, but 20th century songs are a different matter.

With the exception of three good songs by Griffes, Ives, and Barber, the items on the last half of the program were about as significant musically as cotton candy is gastronomically. It was also rather difficult during the folk song group to imagine Miss Lehnerts as a cowboy being "Rounded up in Glory," or as a muleteer on the "Erie Canal." There is a plethora of good folk songs for women. Her singing of "Steal Away," however, was unusually convincing.

Edward MacDowell's dramatic setting of "The Sea" took the honors in the non-contemporary group. Its sympathetic expression of the words was in sharp contrast to the inconsistency of Chadwick's "Allah," which is no more imaginative than his textbook on harmony.

Experts from three operas by Stoessel, Moore and Gershwin closed the first half of the program. Miss Lehnert's interpretation of "My Man's Gone Now," from "Porgy and Bess," was the high dramatic point of the evening.

Dual Rocket-Jet Plane Has First Transonic Test

El Segundo, Calif., May 15 (U.P.) The needle-nosed Douglas D-558-2 Skyrocket plane successfully zoomed aloft for its maiden trial under simultaneous rocket and jet power, the Navy Department's Bureau of Aeronautics revealed today.

The transonic, sleek plane, nicknamed "The Flying Swordfish," made what is believed to be one of the first flights ever attempted under dual rocket and jet power at the Muroc (Calif.) Air Force test center

After exhausting its rocket fuel, the ship continued on a routine research flight and landed under turbo-jet power.

Everybody's Busy Doing Everything

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE: Judith Anderson racked up one more record with "Medea" last week in New York, the clasic bringing $40,000 to the municipally sponsored City Center . . . At a $3 top, this is second only to the larger Center Theater's "This American Way," of 10 years ago and that was more of a pageant than a drama . . . Before her promising Wednesday night performance here at the Sylvan Theater, Miss Anderson will be playing "Medea" tonight at her husbands alma mater, the University of Virginia' and at that fabulous chocolate town, Hershey, Pa., Tuesday night . . . All we need to do now is to pray for good weather Wednesday night . . . Another record, Miss Judith?

POSTMARKED NEW YORK comes a letter about this corner's column on the Barter Theater award to Tallulah: "Darling: Thanks for the article. It certainly ought to help to win my case, because believe you me, this is no publicity stunt and I really resent it terribly . . . Loking forward to seeing you at Olney. Love, Tallulah."

A FEW WEEKS ago, the usually efficient Orval Hopkins borrowed my treasured script of "The Madwoman of Chaillot"—and quickly left it on a bus . . . No one returned it, no harsh words wer said . . . But "Whistle Stopping" Hopkins wrote Estelle Winwood, one of the Madwomen, told her of the loss of my treasure . . . And now in the mail comes Miss Winwood's own script, to the comfort of us both . . . Thanks, Miss Estelle and, by the way, my congratulations to Leora Dana, who won the Clarence Derwent award for her nonfeatured role in your play . . . May Leora do as well by the theater as you have.

LAWRENCE LANGNER, back from the Coast, learns that his 30-year-old one-act "Another Way Out" won Washington's One-Act Play Tournament for the Arts Club and writes: "I wish I had been there to see it. I consider the actors must have achieved a considerable success, when you say 'one could hear every line.' If this happened, the play was bound to be successful! Bernard Shaw and Arnold Daly once engaged in an argument. 'But I can't act it that way,' said Daly. 'It's not necessary for you to act it,' said Shaw. 'All you need to do is to say my lines loud enough so that the audience will hear them!'

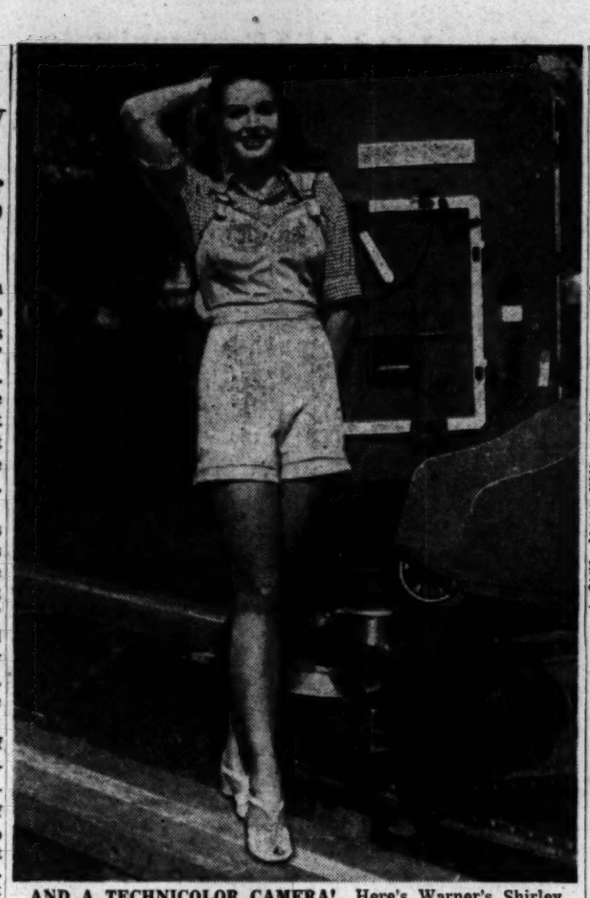
THE NEVILLE GARDNERS are packing to leave Washington . . . He's the hospitable British film man, whose work for Britain's documentaries has brought so much plaeasure and instruction to Washington and points South and West . . . The Gardners will be toasted Tuesday afternoon by the Bill Edwardses and may their next post be half as successful as their Washington venture.

FRANCES STARR, dusting off her "The Corn Is Green" script for Olney the week of June 14, also sharpening her pencils for a brain-chocked convocation at Denison University the end of this month . . . on a list of speakers that will include the mighty Charles F. Kettering, the Metropolitan Museum's Francis H. Taylor and the Philharmonic-Symphony's Arthur Judson, Miss Starr will talk of colleges and acting.

IVAN JANDL, the child star of "The Search," received his Academy Award "Oscar" by proxy Saturday afternoon, when MPA Chief Eric Johnston presented it to Ambassador Vladimir Outrata at the Czechoslovakian Embassy . . . Johnston aptly pointed out that this Oscar to a 12-year-old boy thousands of miles across the water "emphasizes in a most dramatic way the universality of the motion picture."

MINNIE PEARL, Grand Ole Opry's leading lady Thursday night at the Watergate, is one of the week's many bright visitors . . . Minnie's a graduate of Nashville's swank Ward-Belmont College, under her real name, Ophelia Colley . . . After some years of both acting and teaching under that Shakespearean handle, Miss Colley turned gradually to humor and, as gradually, evolved into Minnie Pearl of Grinder's Switch . . . The name's made up, but since her success as the character she's heard of many authentic Minnie Pearls.

TED SHAWN, who'll be dancing here Thursday night at Cafritz Auditorium, shares honors with Darius Milhaud. . . . They've been commissioned by the Coolidge Foundation to do the choreography and music for "The Dream of Jacob," to be done this summer during the Berkshire Festival. . . . After Thursday night's recital, Mrs. John Davis Lodge will hold an on-stage reception for Shawn, with whose company she has danced many times in the past . . . Seats at the Snow agency.



AND A TECHNICOLOR CAMERA! Here's Warner's Shirley Ballard, who'll be playing "the most beautiful girl in the world" in a new comedy, "It's a Great Feeling." and that object at the right is a technicolor camera

N.E. Blaze Blankets Area With Smoke

A two-alarm fire burned out the interior of a two-story building occupied by the A. & A. Electrical Co. at 307 H st. ne. last night, blanketing the area in huge billows of smoke.

Several scores of persons living within a block of the fire were driven from their homes by the smoke which settled toward the ground and seeped through open windows and doors.

The fire was discovered about 10 p. m. There were no injuries, but Edward Smith, 301 H st. ne., a tavern operator, carried his 6-year-old son, Robert, from his upstairs living quarters two doors away when the son awakened the family coughing from smoke.

Traffic Blocked

Traffic was blocked off in the streets near the scene for more than an hour.

William M. Pomms, manager of the electrical firm which maintains an appliance shop on hte first floor and offices above, expressed belief the fire may have started by an exploding X-ray tube in the appliance shop.

Pomms estimated the firm had approximately $50,000 worth of merchandise in the two-story stucco and wood building.

Youth Turns in Alarm

The first alarm was turned in by Jack Porter, 1173 3d st. ne., a 17-year-old youth, passing the building when he noticed small wisps of smoke coming from second-story windows.

Firemen said his promptness in turning in the alarm probably enabled them to confine the fire to the single building.

Senators Urged To Vote Disease Research Funds

By the United Press

Seventy-six prominent Americans urged the Senate economy bloc yesterday to "think it over" and help save more than half the population from premature death from heart disease or cancer.

Sponsors of the National Heart Committee appealed through paid advertisements in daily morning newspapers for approval of an amendment to the Labor-Federal Security appropriation to provide 32 million dollars for research by the National Heart and Cancer Institutes.

The amendment had been adopted tentatively by the Senate, but a Republican-led move returned the entire bill to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to trim 5 per cent from all its reducible items.

Signers of the ad, including Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie and Gen. William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, said it was paid for by "taxpayers . . . who help supply the money for our 41-billion-dollar national budget."

Year-Round Committee On Civil Rights Urged

New York, May 15 (AP).—Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) proposed tonight a year-round joint congressional committee on civil rights.

Private Capital in PUBLIC SERVICE

● In the United States air transportation is operated as a private enterprise. In other countries it is conducted by the government. The United States continues to lead, as it always has, in the development and utilization of air transportation. No other country has a comparable standard of airline service. We believe it is to the nation's interest, as well as to our own, to continue to operate under the system that made this possible.

If, however, private enterprise is to retain the spirit and initiative which makes for progress, it must be convinced that its service is useful and that results are largely dependent on its own effort. A result of our effort is:

In three years, 1946, 1947 and 1948, American Airlines, Inc. invested $60,000,000 in new airplanes and equipment:

This provided business for the aircraft factories and employment for their men, strengthening their ability to contribute to national air power.

It provided one hundred twenty-five airplanes of the most modern design—the largest single fleet of modern transport aircraft in the world, and a direct contribution to national air power.

It provided a new 300-mile-an-hour fleet for the air routes of the United States, assuring time-saving, dependability and safety—more comfort for the passenger and greater speed for all forms of travel, transportation and communication.

In the same three years, American Airlines, Inc. invested $6,000,000 in new and more efficient shop buildings and equipment:

This has provided jobs for trained technicians and modern machinery for their use.

It, thereby, provides an important reserve of skilled personnel available for national air power.

It has provided operating economies which will be reflected in contribution to profitable operation and, ultimately to reduction in charges for air transportation.

It has provided maintenance and overhaul facilities, strategically located, which constitute a reserve for national air power.

Every dollar of the $66,000,000 came from private investors. None of it was borrowed from any agency of the government nor was any of it government subsidy.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

OVER THE WEEKEND, when General Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox asked Clark Griffith, his pappy-in-law, to trade him Pitcher Walter Masterson he had nothing to lose in the asking. But nothing to win, either. Pitching is Griffith's hobby. He doesn't trade pitchers.

He sells and makes deals involving his outfielders, his catchers and his infielders, but with his pitchers Griffith is a miserly hoarder. Perhaps because he was a pitcher himself and knows the importance of pitching.

POVICH

Anyway, he once philosophized about it like this: "You can't win a ball game unless you are in it, and the thing that keeps you in a game is pitching."

That's why, ever since Griffith came on the Washington scene in 1912, pitching has been first in his yearly plans. With Walter Johnson on his payroll for 17 consecutive years, he had a fair start in that direction.

THE ONLY CASE in which Griffith traded away a good pitcher was that of Dutch Leonard three years ago, and that was chiefly a move to get a discontented guy off his ball club. Griffith had a proper esteem for Leonard's ability to win games, but he was weary of salary arguments with the knuckle-baller and suspicious of Leonard's team spirit.

At this moment, the Washington pitching stacks up first-division caliber even more than the rest of the ball club. Cleveland's and New York's may rate better, but none others. It was pitching that enabled the Nats to mop up those three games in Cleveland when Ray Scarborough, Sid Hudson and Mickey Haefner held the Indians to a total of three runs. And in their seven-game losing streak in April, the Nats' pitching was good enough to win six.

Ever since the war, and even before, the Yankees had made repeated offers to Griffith for Walter Masterson, without success. Two years ago, Bucky Harris offered him a wad of players for Sid Hudson. Even when Hudson was useless with a sore arm, Griffith refused to trade, he wouldn't give up on a fellow who had been that good a pitcher.

THERE'S PLENTY of evidence in support of Griffith's reluctance to part with pitchers. Masterson has been his property for 11 seasons now. Hudson is in his tenth year with the Nats. Scarborough has been their property for nine years. Mickey Haefner is the junior member of the Nats' regular staff, with only six years of service.

The guy who walks into a Washington training camp and introduces himself to Griffith as a pitcher, gets a long look in contrast to the fellow who might say he is an infielder or outfielder. That's why the Nats came up with Paul Calvert, winner of four straight at this point. Griffith, a push-over for anybody who can pitch, signed Calvert with alacrity.

He doesn't have much esteem for a club without pitching. That's why he never seriously considered the Red Sox as a pennant threat, and had a high regard for Cleveland. And that's why he is convinced his own Washington club can move into the first division and stay there.

IT WAS GRIFFITH who gave Mickey Haefner a shot at the big leagues after every other club in the majors passed him up. Despite the 18 games he won for Minneapolis in 1942, Haefner was tabbed as "too small" by big league scouts, a label that didn't impress Griffith who was not much bigger, himself, than Haefner when he was leading both major leagues in pitching.

"Show me a little fellow who wins a lot of games in any league, and I tell you he has to have heart to start with," says Griffith. "I like little pitchers who have been winning in the minors. They can't win anywhere without more than their share of courage."

Haefner comes closer to being Griffith's favorite pitcher than any other on his payroll, and that's understandable. In Haefner, he sees his own image—a little guy who couldn't blow the hitter down, but had pitching brains going for him.

Chisox Chase Feller, Clip Tribe Twice, 10-0 and 2-0

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox shut out the world champion Cleveland Indians twice today, 10-0 and 2-0, before a record crowd of 53,325.

Rookie Gordon Goldsberry's first major league home run with a mate on board gave the Sox their second victory. Allen Gettel won the night cap, allowing four hits.

Bill Wight pitched a five-hitter in the opener for his fourth straight win, handing Bob Feller his second loss. Feller was chased in the second inning after giving up four runs.

The scoring spurt that gave Gettel his first victory came in the sixth. Gettel opened with a single off Steve Gromek. Gerry Scala struck out, then Goldsberry lined one into the right field lower deck with his homer.

Gettel was in trouble in only one inning—the fifth—when Cleveland bunched three of its four hits. Lou Boudreau opened with a single but went down in a double play. Herman Reich and Mike tresh singled, but Reich was cut down trying for third.

A new Comiskey park attendance record was set with a paid gate of 53,325 persons.

This count bettered by 897 paid admissions the old record of 52,428 set June 18, 1933 for a Sunday doubleheader between the White Sox and New York Yankees.

Galehouse Gets Job at Seattle

Seattle, May 15 (AP).—Denny Galehouse, 37-year-old right-hander, was signed by the Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League yesterday. He was a free agent.

Galehouse started for the Boston Red Sox last fall in their losing playoff game with the Cleveland Indians for the American League championship. He had helped pitch the St. Louis Brown to their lone American League flag in 1944.

His big league lifetime record is 109 victories and 119 losses.

Bosox Release Pitcher

The Boston Red Sox yesterday optioned Pitcher John (Windy) McCall to Seattle of the Pacific Coast League in a move which cut the squad to 27 players—two over the limit permitted after midnight, May 18.

Locke Avenges PGA Snub With $'s

Bobby Wins Goodall, $3000 With Plus 66

By Oscar Fraley
United Press Sports Writer

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 15 (U.P.).—Taking cash vengeance for being snubbed by the PGA, Bobby Locke of South Africa breezed off with the $3000 first prize in the Goodall Invitation golf tournament today when his fifth sub-par round piled up a winning 66 points.

Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., was second with 33 points—exactly that much in back of the winning Locke—but still good for $2000. Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., was third with 30 points; Byron Nelson of Roanoke, Tex., fourth with 29 points, and Cary Middlecoff, of Memphis, fifth with 27 points on the basis of a final round 33, 32—65 for a competitive course record.

Locke, denied an invitation to next week's PGA tournament in Richmond, Va., spreadeagled the field as he shot a final round 34, 32—66, six under par. That put him 20 strokes under regulation figures for 90 holes following early rounds of 71, 67, 68, 68.

And it boosted the earnings of the accurate Afrikander, who has accused the PGA of "lack of courtesy," to $6900 for the month of May. He started the month winning first money of $1,500 in the Cavalier open and last week cleaned up $2400 in the Greenbrier Invitation.

The straight-shooting, precision-putting traveler from Johannesberg thus was making the American pros pay where it hurt ——in the pocketbook and in prestige—for their snub.

Locke really poured it on in the last round against Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago, golf's leading money winner; long-hitting Chick Harbert of Detroit and steady Jim Turnesa of New York.

Leading by only 9 points as the final 18 holes of play started, he went out in 34, 3 under par, and came home in 32, again 3 under, for a 66. That took 6 points each from 72's by Harbert and Turnesa and 11 points from Mangrum's 77. It boosted his total points to 66, so far in front that he finished all alone.

Barron Is Second, 33 Points Behind

Sid Hudson Beaten as Griffs Lack Punch at Bat

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Joe Dobson, Red Sox right-hander, was the joy-killer for 25,748 Washington fans yesterday, and he brought no happiness into the lives of the Nats, either. He shut 'em out, with four hits, in front of Griffith Stadium's second biggest crowd of the season.

The Red Sox, who aren't supposed to get that kind of pitching, did, and with it assembled a 3-0 victory over the Nats, picking up a run here and there with their seven-hit attack off Sid Hudson and Dick Welteroth.

The defeat dropped the Nats out of fourth place and into a tie with Cleveland for fifth.

In only three of the nine innings did the Nats get to first base against the competent Dobson, who walked only one man and was fast-balling 'em into futility.

If the Nats can be charged with blowing the ball game, they blew it in the fifth inning, when they filled the bases with none out and had Dobson staggering. But in that situation they came up with no runs at all.

Zarilla Comes Through

Hudson tried bravely to keep his nonhitting pals in the ball game, pitching five-hit ball and giving up only two runs in the eight innings he worked, but they couldn't stir up any kind of a run for him.

All of the Red Sox runs came about after two were out. They wrenched a run out of Hudson in the fourth after he walked Williams and Stephens in succession. Doerr hit into a double play, but Al Zarilla pumped a run home with a single to left.

In the sixth, Doerr singled with one out, and with two out he scored all the way from second on a boot by Sherry Robertson, who was busily engaged in retrieving Hitchcock's grounder which he had fumbled in the first place.

Rookie Dick Welteroth yielded their third run, in the ninth. It came with some rapidity, after two were out. Dom DiMaggio whacked a double to left, and Johnny Pesky did the same thing.

Nats Futile in Fifth

The Nats' fifth produced the height of frustration, after they appeared on the way to a big inning with Boston in front, 1-0. Eddie Robinson bounced a two-bagger high off the right field wall, Eddie Yost beat out a hit to Pesky, and Dente drew a walk to fill the bases with none out.

And then the Nats' hopes evaporated rapidly. Al Evans popped up a foul to Pesky, and Sid Hudson got Dobson out of all his trouble with a grounder to Pesky who started a double play via home plate.

A two-bagger by Clyde Vollmer into the left field corner that led off the Nats' seventh was their last gasp. Dobson dispatched the last nine batters he saw, in order.

IN SHORT . . . Manager Joe Kuhel screamed in vain that Vollmer should have been credited a triple on his blow into the left field corner . . . Catcher Al Evans and Birdie Tebbetts, his opposite number on the Red Sox, had warm words after Tebbetts objected to a called strike in the eighth . . . Tebbetts eventually walked, but Evans had the last satisfaction of calling for a pitch-out and trapping him off first base . . . Right Fielder Al Zarilla took hits away from Vollmer and Robertson in the second and fourth innings . . . The Nats' four left-handed batters totaled exactly one hit off Dobson—Robinson's double . . . today, Mickey Haefner will face Jack Kramer of the Sox.

Tigers Split With Browns

St. Louis, May 15 (AP).—Rallying behind the steady pitching of Ned Garver, the St. Louis Browns steam-rolled the Detroit Tigers, 12 to 4, in the second game of today's double-header to gain an even break for the day.

Hal Newhouser, aided by a grand slam homer by Vic Wertz, downed the Browns in the opener, 9 to 3.

The Browns pounded five Bengal pitchers for 11 hits in the nightcap and were the recipients of 14 bases on balls. Nine of the passes were given up by starter Marlin Stuart in the 3 2/3 innings he worked.

Dick Kokos, Sherm Lollar and Stan Spence clouted homers. For Kokos it was his seventh.

Newhouser, after a shaky first inning, blanked the Browns in the opener to chalk up his fourth victory.

Newhouser helped his cause by doubling home one run and scoring another in the Tigers' big inning.

Wertz batted in 10 runs in the four-game series, which was divided by the two teams.

The Tigers showed the Browns a little uncommon courtesy in the first inning of the second game today.

Chapman Hits Two Homers

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—Elmer Valo's fourth straight hit climaxed a seven run sixth inning rally to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 7 to 6 victory over the New York Yankees in the nightcap and a clean sweep of a double-header at Shibe Park today.

Sam Chapman unloaded two home runs—one to tie the game with two out in the ninth—and drove home four runs to give the A's an uphill 11-inning 8-7 triumph in the opener. The second game was called at the end of six innings because of the Pennsylvania Sunday curfew.

Valo's winning hit came with the bases loaded off relief Pitcher Joe Page, fourth Yankee hurler to take the mound. It was the second hit of the inning for the Philadelphia outfielder. He started the rally with a single.

Before it was over the A's had smashed out three more hits, including a bases-loaded double by Chapman. Bob Porterfield and Fred Sanford saw action on the mound for New York before Page came in to serve up the winning hit to Valo.

Chapman's outfield fly with one out and the sacks loaded in the eleventh chased home pinch-runner Nelson Fox with the winning run in the first game.

The A's scored the winning run in the first game without a hit. Relief pitcher Frank Hiller walked three men to fill the bases before Chapman came through with his long outfield fly that settled the game.

New York scored all five runs in the first game off starter Dick Fowler. They were blanked and

Torgeson Lost For Two Months

Boston, May 15 (U.P.).—First Baseman Earl Torgeson of the Boston Braves will be sidelined "the best part of a couple of months" as result of a shoulder separation suffered in last night's game with Brooklyn, a team spokesman announced today.

The spokesman said Dr. Joseph H. Shortell, the team surgeon, will operate on the bespectacled infielder's left shoulder Wednesday because of the seriousness of the injury.

Fight On Again Tonight

A three-time loser to bad weather, the 10-rounder between Heavyweight Pat Comiskey and Elkins Brothers will be held at Griffith Stadium tonight, "rain or not," Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced last night.

It's Ahearn's first outdoor show of the year and he must unlid it tonight or cancel it since the ball park won't be available again for two weeks.

In view of the lack of interest in the card, a cancellation wouldn't come as a distinct disappointment to the thousands who don't plan to attend.

In another 10-rounder, Middleweight Joe Blackwood is booked against Roger Muriel, a Kansas City importation.

Brothers, at 188 and 5 feet 8, will be dwarfed by the 220-pound, 6-feet-4 Comiskey, whom someone has made a 2-1 favorite.

National Golden Gloves Middleweight Champion Roland Randall turns pro against Julian Keene in one scheduled five-round number while Leon Daughtry, local welterweight, faces Sid Harris in another.

An opening four-round bout pairs off Al Williams and Dave Roberston, welters, at 8:45.

Plebes Win Dinghy Regatta

Annapolis, Md., May 15 (AP).—Navy's plebe skippers outsailed Freshmen from three colleges today to win a quadrangular dinghy regatta on the Severn River.

The Academy yachtsmen ran up 110 points, 36 of them by winning four races. Maryland was second with 104, Lafayette third with 81 and Drexel last with 55. The affair had been billed as a heptagonal regatta, but Georgetown, Lehigh and George Washington withdrew.

Braves Whip Dodgers, 4-0

Boston, May 15 (AP).—Hight-hander Vernon Bickford and Jim Russell combined to keep the Boston Braves in a first-place tie with the New York Giants by fashioning a 4-0 shutout over the Brooklyn Dodgers today before a chilled 26,118 gathering.

Bickford tossed a four-hitter as the National League champions swept a three-game series with the Dodgers and Russell drove in three runs with a homer and a two-base hit.

While Bickford was fashioning his fourth win against two defeats, the Dodgers' Gil Hodges connected safely in his 17th consecutive game.

The Boston victory, the Tribesmen's tenth in their current 15-game home stand, was clinched in the fourth inning when fleet Al Dark scored from second on Bob Elliott's infield hit.

Russell lashed his first four-bagger of the campaign in the seventh and then doubled with Dark and Sibby Sisti on base in the eighth.

Hodges was the only Dodger to reach second, thanks to a wild peg by Bob Elliott, as Bickford totaled six strikeouts and gave but two bases on balls.

Kennedy Pitches 3d Triumph

New York, May 15 (AP).—Monty Kennedy equalled his 1948 major league victory total today as he turned in his third triumph of the season in pitching the red hot New York Giants to a 7-3 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The victory enabled the Giants to sweep the three-game series and maintain their first place National League tie with the Boston Braves.

Kennedy spun a seven-hitter as the Giants closed their home stand with their tenth triumph in 12 games.

The Giants collected only eight hits but took advantage of seven bases on balls to hand young Curt Simmons his second defeat. Simmons gave up seven hits and three passes in four innings during which the Giants took a 5-1 lead.

Stan Lopata of the Phils hit his second homer and a single which led to the Phils' last run in the ninth.

Good 3-Year-Olds are Specialists

Camera Gives Capot Nod Over Palestinian in Preakness

Preakness Shows Capot Can Sprint, Ponder Can't

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

When time comes to select the 3-year-old champion of 1949 it may be appropriate to put a half dozen names in a hat and draw one.

Of course horse racing is unpredictable and things could happen between now and snowfall, but at this writing, I can picture the current crop, putting their heads together on New Year's Eve and singing, "We're jolly good fellows because we beat each other."

Not since 1936 when Granville, who lost Jockey Jimmy Stout at the Derby break and was nipped on the Preakness wire by Bold Venture, went on to be voted champ, has there been anything like the present 3-year-old scramble.

They are specialists, these Ponders, Capots, Palestinians, Olympias and Noble Impulses. If the "best holts," as they say on the backstretch, of each were incorporated into one, undoubtedly we would have another Citation, Assault, Count Fleet or War Admiral.

Ponder appears to have the marathon title at his mercy. His Derby, at a mile and a quarter, was a masterpiece and there's no reason he shouldn't take the opposition into camp in the Belmont, at a mile and a half.

Capot, Noble Impulse Sprinters

But for the mile and three sixteenths of the Preakness or a mile and an eighth, Capot looks like the real boy, perhaps a bit better suited to the latter distance.

The best horse-for-horse match that I can think of at the moment would be Olympia vs. Noble Impulse at a mile and we could get that meeting in New York's Withers.

Palestinian, provided he retains Eddie Arcaro as hte driver, will have to be dealt with all along the line. He definitely is on the "improve" and could end up with the crown. Perhaps the Preakness route was his best distance. If so he'd be out of luck because there are no other stakes at that odd distance.

Evidence that the 3-year-old field is an open one is shown by the results of the major tests to date. Olympia took the Flamingo. Old Rockport whipped him in the Santa Anita Derby. Ponder trounced both in the Kentucky Derby. Capot beat off Ponder in the Preakness.

Race Too Short for Ponder

Regarding the Preakness, the question is being asked, "What happened to Ponder?"

The logical answer is that the distance was short for him.

Last week, in trying to explain how Ponder was helped in the Derby because Jockey Steve Brooks was told he didn't have much chance and thus had all to win and nothing to lose, I brought out that, had Brooks been on a 5-2 shot, he might have bungled what turned out to be a perfect ride.

In the Derby, Ponder took the overland route when he began his diamond-studded move. He was always clear and far outside of other horses. In addition, he was allowed to run on his own courage in the early part of it.

In the Preakness, it appeared to me that Brooks, no longer on a so-so longshot but aboard a definite contender, trid to rate Ponder under a grip in the rear of the field and overdid it, the Calumet colt being 20 lengths off the pace at one stage.

Brooks Tried to Save Ground

When Ponder made his move, Brooks also appeared to try to save some ground, cutting the corners instead of using the wide circular swing that seemed to suit the colt so well at Churchill Downs.

But it must be remembered that Ponder was beaten in track record time. Perhaps the son of Pensive simply can't go a mile and three sixteenths in 1:56 or better.

I'm not condemning Brooks. He had to allow for the shorter route and planned his ride accordingly.

However, I just can't help but feel that, unknowingly, Brooks didn't handle the favorite Ponder the way he rode the longshot Ponder.

Maryland Defending Champs Bow

Both local teams came through with flying colors yesterday in the Maryland State Golf Association team championships semifinals. Prince Georges trounced Hillendale, 16½-1½, while Washington Golf and Country Club stopped the defending champion from the Country Club of Maryland, 10½-7½.

At Prince Georges the outcome was never in doubt with Al Houghton and Mike Jankowski getting the home club off to a three-point lead which their mates steadily increased.

Villemain, Mead Share Spotlight In Ring Program

Mead, a game fighter from Grand Rapids, Mich., and Truman, Ark., takes on Villemain, the flailing Frenchman, in the Garden Friday night. This is the blond belter's first outing since the seven-round kayo of De John.

SENATORS, PLEASE THINK THIS OVER!

While you are voting tens of billions of dollars for other important needs— please vote the few millions of dollars necessary to help prevent over half the U. S. population from dying prematurely.

THIS ADVERTISEMENT is being paid for by American taxpayers, who are as anxious as you are to hold down our national budget!

At the same time the expenditure of a comparatively few millions of dollars for adequate appropriations for the National Heart Institute and the National Cancer Institute can help prevent millions of premature American deaths. These dollars are necessary for research, construction of research facilities, and training of research workers.

Nearly 64 million Americans now alive will die too young of heart diseases—and over 19 million Americans now alive will die of cancer, unless new treatments and cures are found. Approximately half of all heart and cancer deaths occur in people under 65 years of age.

In addition to the tragedy and heartbreak of this—the economic loss is incalculable.

We who help to supply the money for our 41-billion-dollar national budget—including over 5 billion dollars for European aid—urge you to sustain the amendments passed by the Senate on April 27, 1949 for heart and for cancer research.

The amount of money involved for both the heart and cancer amendments is approximately 32 million dollars.

Leading heart and cancer doctors have testified before the Appropriations Committee that this is a minimum amount required. Much more has been requested by outstanding medical institutions, and could be used effectively.

The lives of over half of our population are at stake.

We are for economy, just as you are, but we urge that this amount of money—which is substantially less than one-tenth of one per cent (1/10 of 1%) of our total national budget, be applied to these vital life-saving projects.

Senators, please think this over!

Millions may live longer—if you vote in favor of the heart and cancer amendments to the Labor-Federal Security Administration Appropriations Bill.

U. S. Citizenship Involves Responsibilities, Barkley Tells 5000 on 'I Am American' Day

Vice President, Clark And Kimball Address Capitol Audience; Planes Fly in Salute

Citizenship carries responsibilities as well as privileges, Vice President Barkley said yesterday at the District's "I Am An American Day" celebration.

The Vice President addressed an audience of 5000 persons gathered at the east steps of the Capitol.

Among those on the program with him were Dan A. Kimball, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, and Attorney General Clark, who introduced the Vice President.

They spoke against a background of massed flags of patriotic organizations, under a sky at times sunny and at times threatening the rain which came later.

Child Takes Prize Seat

As if to emphasize the informality of democratic life in America, a blond child in a red and blue plaid dress ran from the audience shortly after the start of the program and took an empty seat in front of the Vice President and Attorney General. She remained there during much of the program, staring wide-eyed at the Government heads and the audience.

The Vice President, declaring it was a privilege to speak from the steps of the historic building, said, "Enjoyment of the American way of life is not a one-way street.

"There is a corresponding obligation on the part of every citizen to support his Government. He can criticize it if he wants, and it frequently needs it," the Vice President said, "but he has the obligation and responsibility to defend the Government."

"To the vast majority of people, it is not necessary to celebrate 'I Am An American Day,'" Barkley said, adding that it is fitting that people rededicate themselves.

"Free Because of Effort"

Kimball said "We are not free by chance. We are free because of effort and struggle; that is how we became free and that is how we expect to remain free.

"We are spending unheard-of sums of our money to make sure that our freedoms cannot be taken from us," he said. "We are convincing the world, which only a little while ago was in doubt, that we mean to support free men wherever they are, and the upsurge of spirit in free men everywhere is evidence of their reliance on our intentions."

Representative Dawson (D., Ill.) introduced Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion, who led the audience in the pledge of allegiance.

Col. Waldron E. Leonard, head of the Veterans Service Center and chairman of the program, read the President's proclamation of "I Am an American Day," and Commissioner Guy Mason extended the greetings of the District Commissioners.

In Indian dress, Frank Topash, past Veterans of Foreign Wars department commander, gave a tribute to America; radio entertainer Bob Smith presented Howdy Doody and Clara Belle; Maria de la Hull sang "God Bless America" and Gene Archer the national anthem.

A Barber Shop quartet comprising Carroll Hefner, Charles Rhodes, Charles Hay and Ed Pace, also sang.

Msgr. John S. Spence, superintendent of parochial schools in the Washington archdiocese, gave the invocation, and Rev. H. B. Taylor, D.D., the benediction.

The United States Marine Band, Metropolitan Police Band and Elks' Boys' and Grls' Band of Silver Spring, Md., also participated, and Army, Navy and District Air National Guard planes joined in a salute overhead.

Boston Expert Hired to Study D. C. Hospitals

Survey to Determine Most Economical Way Of Investigating Cases

A Boston welfare expert has been hired to help decide whether it would be cheaper for hospitals to do their own investigating of Community Chest-supported patients.

Such patients are now investigated and certified by the Hospital Service Agency, a nonprofit corporation. Hospital administrators, however, say they can do the job cheaper.

Scheduled to arrive today for the special duty is Robert P. Lane of Boston, former director of the Welfare Council in New York City.

Chosen to Assemble Facts

His selection was announced by Chester Morrill, chairman of the Hospitalization Fund Committee of the Community Chest Federation, in personal letters to the individual hospital administrators, the Hospital Service Agency and the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area.

The outsider was engaged, Morrill said, to "assemble necessary facts from the hospitals, the Council, HSA and the Chest Federation on the total relative costs involved under the proposed decentralization procedures."

Morrill estimated that Lane's special study would take about one week.

The long-standing controversy between the hospitals and HSA broke out anew last November when Willard C. Smith, HSA director, protested to Community Chest officials that the hospitals were setting up their own admissions standards, and that "some" were refusing to admit HSA-certified cases under these standards.

The Hospital Council, representing the hospitals, countered that it had "approved in principle" a move of its members to force abandonment of HSA. It later submitted its own plan of patient-certification by the individual hospitals.

Boy, 21 Months, Falls 2 Stories, Appears Unhurt

A man fell from a roof and a 21-month-old boy fell out of a second-story window, both without apparent injury, in two of the District's 110 home accidents last week.

Two other children who fell out of second-story windows last week were admitted to Children's Hospital for possible head injuries.

The following substances were swallowed during the week by District children: a screw, a dime, a nickel, shoe polish, disinfectants, camphorated oil, kerosene and turpentine.

Resurrected, Rebuilt '04 Rambler Relic Capably Chugs Grubb on Capital Circuits

Nash Executive Hits Snappy 15 Miles in Car He Rejuvenated

Howard B. Grubb, an amiable individual, enjoys the broad grins that invariably greet him when he drives along Washington streets these days. When he can, he smiles back, and maybe waves a hand.

But when you're cutting down Wisconsin ave. at a snappy 10 or 15 miles an hour in a 1904 Rambler —grandpappy of the modern Nash —your best bet is to give full time and attention to the task at hand. In fact, it's essential.

Grubb found the 45-year-old relic about a year ago, sagging beneath accumulated dust and rust in a farmer's barn near Lorton, Va. It hadn't rolled since 1912. He paid $500 for it and had it hauled here.

Rebuilt Relic

That was the beginning. From then until March, when he finally got the Rambler running, he spent each weekend working on the car. "It had to be completely rebuilt," reported Grubb yesterday—a job he did himself.

One reason it took so long was that many engine parts had to be machined. Grubb repaired the black leather upholstery in places. He had to have tires specially built.

In all, the 37-year-old executive of Nash Motors estimates he has spent $1200 on the car. The 15-pound pistons for the opposed two-cylinder engine, for instance, were an expensive item. That natty red paint job, the original color, was another.

Passed Inspection

What he has wound up with is giving him and his wife and friends a lot of fun. He got the car through the District vehicle inspection test without a hitch April 28, and since then he's been steering it about during daylight hours as much as possible. Has it up to 20 miles an hour, he beams.

Grubb isn't permitted to drive the Rambler at night, because the inspectors found the twin driving lights — oil lamps — were inadequate.

The Rambler starts, with surprisingly little urging, by being cranked. It steers from the right front seat. Transmission is the same as that of the Model T Ford. It is chain-driven, turns on a dime, rides like a dream, and stops with a prayer, according to the owner.

To Grubb, who lives at 3130 Wisconsin ave. nw., the most remarkable thing about the ancient, but sporty, auto is that it runs at all.

And then, mindful perhaps of the work he put into it, he changes his mind. Since it does run, and well, too, he says the most remarkable thing about it is the ease with which he cranks the motor.

Citizens who watch the car's popping progress along the street, and the friends who ride with Grubb in the trim, open-top four-seater, share his enjoyment in the rambling relic.

Suspect Held In 4 Holdups, 2 Shootings

3 Liquor Merchants Identify Prisoner As Having Robbed Establishments

A 28-year-old man, captured Saturday after robbery of a liquor store, yesterday was confronted with three additional robbery charges, two charges of assault with intent to kill and one charge of unauthorized use of an auto.

The charges, police said, followed identification of the suspect, Edward Lindsey, 28, no fixed address, at a special police line-up by three liquor store merchants who had been victimized.

Lindsey was found lying in weeds near a hedge in the 1500 block of Young st. se., by police who gave chase after a man identified as Lindsey took $145 at gunpoint Saturday from Mrs. Mary O'Connor, proprietor of a liquor store at 2904 Minnesota ave. se.

Holdups Enumerated

Besides the O'Connor holdup, Lindsey was charged in the following cases:

1. Holdup of a liquor store at 429 15th st. ne., on March 25. Edward Smith, the proprietor, was robbed of $480. The gunman in fleeing fired a shot which narrowly missed Smith.

2. Holdup of a liquor store at 300 Massachusetts ave. ne., on April 6. Proprietor Morris Berger was robbed of $370 and $5 was taken from a customer. The gunman shot and slightly wounded another patron.

3. Holdup of a liquor store at 654 H st. ne., March 8. Proprietor Sam Shapiro was robbed of $400.

Station Wagon Stolen

It was in a jeep station wagon stolen from Shapiro that the gunman fled the scene of Saturday's holdup.

Lindsey is scheduled to be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

In another case, Thomas A. O'Leary, 48, of 208 C st. nw., reported to police that an unidentified man struck him in the face and robbed him of $50 as he sat in a park at 5th and I sts. nw., early yesterday morning.

Three Youths Seized After Chase, 4 Shots

Three juveniles were arrested early yesterday and charged with unauthorized use of an automobile after a policeman fired four shots at them during a chase. Two of the boys are 17 the third 16.

The lads were spotted by Police Pvt. Harvey Womble near the 300 block of 11th st. ne., driving in a car which Creed Clark, 303 11th st. ne., had reported stolen shortly before. The officer, in a scout car, chased the boys eight blocks until they ran into a tree at 12th and D sts. ne.

The boys leaped from the car and started to run. Womble fired four shots. All missed. He caught up with one of the boys at that time, and later arrested the other two.

Womble was a partner of Police Corpl. Grady A. Beacham, when Beacham was shot to death by an former convict, Robert S. Wilkerson, whom he sought to arrest last December. Womble, in turn, slew Wilkerson.

Pastor of Calvary Methodist Scores 'Evil Practices of Some Rent Agents'

People who are complacently comfortable were told by a minister yesterday to "go sit in a slum home for a while" to find out how bad District slum housing is.

The Rev. Dr. Orris Gravenor Robinson also asserted in a sermon at Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw., that "no Christian would countenance any investment in slum housing."

Scoring the "unsightly slums and deplorable crime," the "ugly spirit toward other races and the lamentable drunkenness" of Washington, the clergyman said:

"To know what makes the difference between health and illness, happiness and ugliness, peace and strife in this complex world, one must sit with the people where the struggle is going on."

"The comfortably housed are too often unaware of the evil practices of some rental agencies, and ignorant of what bad housing does.

They ought to know that any investment that helps to maintain a condition for living which creates resentments among the people destroys the only security a society has—the faith of people in each other and their form of government—as well as produces disease and crime.

"Most people who live in the roomy, airy clean comfort of good housing have a feeling that those who live otherwise are either indolent or misfits in society.

"Who is going to try to understand the resentment of people living in bug-ridden, unrepaired, unpainted high-rental homes if he holds the people who live under these conditions in contempt?

"The best way to exercise this contempt, is to visit some of the homes in our bad housing areas, such as that east of our Calvary Church, an area which is a breeder of disease and crime, notorious for substandard housing and lack of recreational facilities.

"No one should live under such conditions. We cannot build a healthy-minded people in slum areas — we cannot prevent the frustration and resentment or the development of either irresponsibility and crime or the spirit of revolution.

"To feel the agony of parents who watch their children disintegrate in a socially diseased community, is something that the steely heart cannot take without a quiver. If we followed through on our Christian teachings we would battle for better housing conditions for the last person in our city."

1-Man Unification

Army, Navy, Marines All Had Hasty

The uniformed career of Jesse Hasty, a military man if you ever saw one, has achieved a degree of unification beyond the wildest dreams of Defense Secretary Johnson.

Jesse, who lives at 702 Lawrence st. ne., has been in uniform for the last 32 years, in just about every kind of uniform except that of the Swiss navy.

In 1918 he was throwing shells over the front lines of St. Mihiel, France, in the uniform of an Army Coast Artilleryman.

At the end of that dispute, he tried to enlist in the Navy, landed in the wrong recruiting office, and woke up a United States Marine.

After a few years in the Dominican Republic, he enlisted in the ranks of matrimony, and two days later donned the uniform of a Hagerstown, Md., policeman.

Six years later he switched uniforms again, this time as a member of the Washington police force.

The second World War was only a few weeks old when Jesse became a chief gunner's mate, this time in the Coast Guard in Puerto Rico and New Jersey.

Back on the police force after the war, Hasty couldn't help feeling he had slighted the Navy. Today, he is a proud member of the biggest fleet in the world, master-at-arms of the Organized Naval Reserve of the Potomac River Naval Command.

He has three children, sons, all in uniform: two in the Naval Reserve, and one, Larry, aged 12, a proud member of the schoolboy patrol at Brookland Grade School.

A man of 38 was in a serious condition in Casualty Hospital yesterday after both his legs were cut off by a freight train Saturday night.

Train Engineer Charles M. Boalsinger said he saw what he thought was a bundle of rags lying on the track and tried to stop the train. His efforts were futile, and the engine and nine cars passed over Peyton.

Frank Effort In Intergroup Work Urged

Prejudices Must Be Overcome, Rabbi Tells Fellowship

Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation yesterday urged members of the Interchurch Fellowship of Washington to face the problem of improving intergroup relations frankly and without discouragement.

He spoke at an interfaith and interracial service sponsored by the fellowship at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw.

He pointed out that the movement for intergroup, interracial and interfaith cooperation is less than 25 years old and is struggling against the prejudices and mistakes of centuries.

Asserting that today is a time of disillusionment, he added that "it is sometimes healthy to be disillusioned because the sooner illusions are broken the sooner truth will become apparent."

The following principles must underlie any wise, effective approach to living together, he said:

1. Face the problems of intergroup and interfaith relations frankly because the areas of irritation will not cure themselves.

2. Recognize that interfaith and intergroup misunderstanding did not arise in our time but are rooted in history.

3. Recognize that there will always be differences among men.

4. Recognize that good will is not a one-way street, that each group has much to give to enrich the lives of all groups.

5. Recognize the forces of nationalism, greed and creed which are organized against us.

6. Approach our task of bringing intergroup cooperation with a keen sense of our own shortcomings.

$5-Million Project At Terminal Begun

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Modernization of equipment and facilities in Union Station and its yards is now in progress under a three-pronged construction program expected to cost almost five million dollars over the next two years.

One project will—among other things—eliminate smoke and ashes from the Ivy City roundhouse power plant, a source of complaints from residents of the Brentwood Terrace area.

Another is designed to provide more flexible and faster shifting of cars of through trains between the North and South, eliminating delays.

The third will shift the servicing of the ever-increasing Diesel-electric engines to a separate roundhouse at Ivy City, with new shops and equipment for more efficient operations, Superintendent Sidney Kerl of the Washington Terminal Co. explained yesterday.

Affecting Washington citizens most is the plan, now under way, to produce at one source all steam needed for both Eckington Yards, between New York ave. and T st. ne., and the Ivy City engine house and repair shops at New York ave. south of Montana ave. ne.

The Eckington power plant in the heart of the coach yards, soon to be bolstered by two new boilers, will provide steam for both.

The steam is used not only to heat the buildings in the two installations, but primarily to preheat railroad cars in the yards and feed locomotive boilers when fires are being started. Air-conditioning on some cars is also steam-activated. Eckington Yards can accommodate 150 cars.

Already constructed are a 10-inch steam line and a 5-inch air line running more than a half-mile betweeen Eckington Yards and Ivy City. During installation of the two new 50,000-pounds-an-hour boilers, which will replace two obsolete 42-year-old models, steam will flow from the Ivy City power plant to feed the Eckington facilities.

Plant to Be Dismantled

The boiler installation and renovation of the Eckington plant will take the rest of this year, Keri estimated. After that ,the steam will be reversed and the Ivy City power plant will be dismantled.

Smoke and ashes from this plant have been the greatest source of complaints from citizens living near the yards. The new Eckington plant will also be equipped with the latest smoke-abating devices, Kerl said, and by 1950 or 1951 will receive two more new boilers.

The entire steam power project will cost about $1,200,000, Kerl said. Another phase of the modernization of terminal facilities—extension and straightening of four tracks and platforms, as well as other construction made necessary by this—involves an expenditure of about 3½ million dollars, according to the superintendent.

Four passenger train tracks on the lower level of the station, served by the First st. ne. tunnel, will be straightened and their platforms lengthened to accommodate trains of 19 to 21 cars each without overlapping, Kerl explained. The present limit is 15 cars.

Longer Trains Used

This job, made necessary by the use of longer trains for through traffic to and from Southern points, has forced the relocation and straightening of the nearby Railway Express tracks and platforms along Second st. ne. Six straight tracks are now being built there to replace 12 curved tracks of lesser capacity, as space is needed for the passenger train tracks.

When the Railway Express track work is completed, several bridges carrying these tracks over H st. ne. will require strengthening and realignment, and one new bridge will be built paralleling the express warehouse.

In the station two escalators will be relocated and a new one built to accommodate passengers using the new lower level train tracks, Kerl said. One of the headaches in any track changes, he pointed out, is the relocation of overhead electric wire installations.

The new tracks will provide more flexible operation of through trains, Kerl said, eliminating delays sometimes experienced at present.

"Right now," he said, "three 17-car trains will tie up the nine lower level tracks. If we don't hit them to shift cars as soon as they get here, they stack up on the thoroughfare tracks and we can't get around them."

Rain Rules Out Gardens For Parties Yesterday

By Marie McNair

Gardens lay a-wasting at party time yesterday.

Mrs. George Holmes entertaining for her brother, the new Undersecretary of Defense Stephen Early, and Mrs. Early, gave up the idea of opening her rose rimmed garden when blackened skies hovered overhead.

The British Minister, Sir Derick Hoyer Millar, and Lady Millar, also kept a weather eye out for their guests, due at the same time—6 o'clock. But the cloudburst, descending just at cocktail time, apparently had no effect.

Old friends of Mary Holmes and her brother-and sister-in-law, Steve and Helen Early, came just the same, looked longingly out of the wide windows on the bricked garden with crimson ramblers climbing over the walls; at the chalk white garden chairs drawn up to small tables.

Mrs. Holmes and the Earlys stood in the front drawing room, the hostess and Mrs. Early both in sheer black gowns sparkling with gold and diamond clips and pins.

Between Raindrops

Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, said she ran between the raindrops, from her house a block away; Mrs. Lyle Wilson, had only to come from next door.

Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, and Mrs. Vandenberg, and Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip made the trip from Fort Myer. And Gen. and Mrs. Richard Cutts had come all the way from their place at The Plains, Va.

Cornered by a quartet of attractive women was Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, his "gallery" including Mrs. Tom Clark, who came with her husband, the Attorney General; Mrs. Omar Bradley, wife of the Army Chief of Staff, who was also there; Mrs. Conger Pratt, and Mrs. Curtis Shears.

Former Secretary of the Navy, John L. Sullivan, was there and Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright and Senator Homer Ferguson, but I didn't see his Missus. Mrs. Stuart Symington, wife of the Secretary of the Air Force sipped a drink in the hallway, and I saw Mrs. Parker West, the Tom Blakes, and Representative and Mrs. Clark W. Thompson.

Downstairs Harry Holmes had set up the buffet table and a bar, with cold turkeys and hams, sandwiches and cocktail snacks.

I saw George Williams, drinking hot coffee, and about to leave for Mrs. Randolph H. Miner's dinner for her niece and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Sayre McNeil, visiting her from Los Angeles. George, just back form New York, was with Mrs. George Mesta at the Wednesday night opening of the new Sheraton Hotel, and a gala dinner and dance.

Fred Roy was finding "traffic" between upstairs and down a bit difficult, and others there were Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, the Clark Cliffords, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis and Charles Ross, Presidential Secretary, and Mrs. Ross.

Oblensky There

The rain beat down on the green garden at Sir Derick and Lady Hoyer Millar's pleasant house on Kalorama rd., filling the tiny blue lined fountain set down in the middle of the lawn.

Inside, in the long drawing room, Lady Hoyer Millar in a summer print frock, moved about from one group to another, admitting that she was rapidly losing her voice trying to make herself heard above the chatter.

"Exciting, isn't it," said Mrs. Arthur Gardner, sitting on a sofa with Prince Serge Oblensky of New York, and speaking of the announcement of her daughter Joan's engagement to Alexander Britton Browne.

The Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon, and Senora de Dillon were there, Senora de Dillion telling me that in a week they'll be flying to Paris and thence to Rome. "My husband needs a rest" she said, "so we'll spend only four days in Paris, and after a stay in Rome we will go to Capri."

Mrs. John M. Cabot and Mrs. Lewis Clark, who were leaving together, were calling themselves the "Chinese Widows," for their husbands are both staying on in China, the one as Consul General in Shanghai, the other serving as Minister Counselor of our embassy in Canton. The Clark Cliffords were at this pleasant party and Senora de Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Gen. and Mrs. Robert Walsh and the Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Berard.

Frederick Brooke was chatting with Mrs. Harold Hinton. Mrs. Brooke was there, so was Mr. Hinton, and then I saw Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt.

Twig Dance List Grows

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Grew and Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan are among additional patrons for the Twig dance to be held Friday evening in the Alexandria roller skating rink.

Other new sponsors are Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hoxton, Representative and Mrs. Howard W. Smith, the Rev. and Mrs. B. B. Comer Lile, Rear Admiral and Mrs. J. P. B. Truman Plays for Mrs. Moses At Tea for Award Winners

President Truman was a lion among ladies yesterday at the tea given by Mrs. Truman in honor of the award winners of the Women's National Press Club annual dinner and stunt party. "Grandma" Moses, winner of the art award of the press club, was the one who asked the President to play. He obliged with good grace and gave the group Paderewski's Minuet.

Before the afternoon was over, she said she intended to paint his portrait from memory.

Other guests said Mrs. Moses "monopolized" the President. Or maybe it was vice versa. Mr. Truman was heard to remark that she reminded him of his mother.

They were seated side by side on a davenport and their conversation was inaudible to the others. Suddenly the President rose, walked to the piano and began playing Paderewski's "Minuet." Mrs. Moses listened intently.

Asked later what prompted Mr. Truman to play, Mrs. Moses said: "I told him I couldn't believe he could play the piano."

"He's just like one of my boys," she continued. "I can't make him seem like the President."

Mrs. Moses doesn't drink tea and was told that the Trumans had brewed coffee especially for her.

"Oh, I don't want them to do that," she exclaimed. "I don't want to be under obligation."

Accompanying 88-year-old Grandma Moses was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who receiped the "Woman of the Year Award," were Madeleine Carroll, Mrs. Dorothy McCullough, Mayor of Portland, Oreg.; Mary Jane Ward, author of the "Snake Pit," and Marjorie Child Husted of General Mills Co.

President Truman made the presentations Saturday night at the press club's annual award dinner and stunt party.

Also attending the party were Miss Dorothy Williams, president of the Women's National Press Club; Mrs. Elinor Lee, first vice president; Miss Isabelle Story, second vice president; Mrs. Margot Grubb, recording secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, corresponding secretary; Miss Mildred Diefenderfer, treasurer, and Miss Marie Sauer, Miss Ruth Cowan and Miss Martha Strayer, members of the board of governors.

Following the Press Club dinner and stunt show Saturday Mrs. Roosevelt was honored at a reception given by McCall's magazine at the Carlton Hotel. The party signalized the publication of the former First Lady's new memoirs, "This I Remember," which will begin serially in the June issue of McCall's.

Hadassah's New Medical School Discussed at Seaboard Meeting

The new Hadassah Medical School which will open Tuesday in Jerusalem was the main topic of discussion at yesterday's sessions of the twenty-fourth annual Seaboard Region Convention of Hadassah. The convention opened Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel.

At the banquet last evening Mrs. Moses P. Epstein, former national president of the society, and now national political and public relations chairman, spoke in praise for the new school which has been organized jointly by the Hadassah Hospital and the Hebrew University, and she also appealed to the delegates for contributions to the proposed Haim Hassk Memorial Hospital to be built in Beersheba in the Negev Desert.

Sharing the rostrum with Mrs. Epstein were two of Hadassah Hospital's staff members: Dr. Edward Joseph, head of the surgery department, and Dr. Aryeh Fegenbaum, head of ophthomology. Both are touring leading medical centers in this country to witness the modern techniques used in their fields. Mrs. Samuel Lubin, regional president, presided and Rabbi Henry Segal led the invocation.

Youth Camps Described

At a luncheon earlier at the Jewish Community Center, Mrs. Zvi Schwarz described vital work of the "Youth Aliyah" camps and the playgrounds in Jerusalem, which she supervises as Hadassah recreational director. Hosts at the luncheon were the five Hadassah chapters in the Metropolitan area.

Yesterday's sessions opened with a breakfast for the business and professional division of Hadassah. Mrs. Jessie Breier, regional "B. & P." president, presided. This was followed by a business session presided over by Mrs. Lubin. Mrs. Joseph Freedman, president of the Washington Chapter, greeted the delegates and the invocation was spoken by Mrs. Philip Kroskin of Norfolk, Va.

Then reports were read by Mrs. David Landy of Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Breier and Miss D. Levy of Baltimore, Md., representing Junior Hadassah.

Mrs. E. J. Evans of Durham, N. C., presided over a group discussion on organization and Mrs. Henry Segal led the roundtable conference on program management.

In the afternoon sessions membership prizes were given to the chapters at Charlotte, N. C., Newport News, Va., and Durham and Greensboro, N. C. They were awarded gavels made from Israeli olive trees. Secondary membership awards went to chapters of Charlottesville, Va.; Fayetteville, N. C.; Martinsville, Va., and Winston-Salem, N. C. And honorable mention to Annapolis, Md.; Gastonia, N. C.; Lynchburg, Va., and Roanoke, Va.

Group Discussions Held

Mrs. Leon Shrater of Baltimore and Mrs. H. H. Schwartz of Charlotte, N. C., won prizes for their individual efforts in procuring new members.

Sessions yesterday also included a group discussion of the Speakers Institution by Mrs. Daniel Shiller of Richmond, Va., and "Hadassah on the American Scene—Public Relations," led by Mrs. Epstein.

A "two-way passage" of fashions will be featured at the fashion show and luncheon closing the conference at 12:30 p. m. today at Hotel Statler.

Fashions shown will be styles for teenagers, made by Washington members of Hadassah for shipment to Israel for children now entering that country and modeled by the members' teenage daughters, and clothes made in Israel by vocational students at the Alice Seligsberg Vocational School, a Hadassah-supported organization, sent here for display.

The clothes made here under the supervision of Mrs. Philip Cooper, sewing and knitting chairman of Washington Hadassah chapter, will be modeled by the Misses Morrine Miller, Matilde Lourie, Terry Youngman, Corrine Aister, Na'ama Lubin, and Ruth Anne Zinder, all members of young Judea groups in town.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Nested Boxes

Children under 5 or 6 years of age can have a lot of fun with the sturdy corrugated paper boxes in which so many household items are delivered to our homes. Of course, they won't wear as long as more sturdily made toys but they are fun while they last.

If possible, each one should be just a bit larger than the other so that they can easily be stored without taking up too much space. Then, too, the younger children will have great fun fitting one into the other.

Such boxes can be piled high to make towers, can be tied together to form a very satisfactory train, can be used as temporary homes for the family dolls, and can be played with in many other ways. Painted with colorful enamel paints, they are attractive. Even the young child can get a great deal out of cardboard box play. The boxes are light enough to be handled easily and large enough so that there is little of the irritation that smaller objects bring to the youngster who hasn't yet developed the fine muscle coordinations that come with more experience and with physical maturing.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman's Younger Sister Stole Her First Husband and Ignored Her Until She Married Again; Now She Agitates for Reconciliation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am married to Phil, a wonderful man who has a good education and a good position. I love him more than anything on earth and our happiness means everything to me. We have a fine little son and live quite comfortably.

The problem is my younger sister Sue, now married to my former husband Bob. When Bob and I married some years ago, Sue came to live with us; and six months later she packed and left before I knew she was gone, and Bob asked me for a divorce so that he could marry her! Words cannot describe my shock at realizing they had reached this decision behind my back.

I gave Bob a divorce and joined the Wacs. Then Phil came into my life. Until recently no one mentioned Sue to me and I didn't hear from her; but lately my family, especially my mother, keeps insisting that I ought to "make up" with Sue—and I think they have been talking to Phil, for he also has mentioned several times that I ought to let bygones be bygones and make the family happy.

Sister's Campaign Breeds New Trouble

ONCE Sue and Bob called at our home, but I shut the door in their face when I saw who was there. Mother says, "Why don't you make up with poor Sue; she is heartbroken because you have put her out of your life,"—but I think she put herself out of my life, and ought to stay away and leave me alone, having destroyed my love and respect for her.

This "poor Sue" campaign is getting on my nerves, and I am afraid that Phil has begun to think I still care for Bob, which I certainly do not—and that he wants us to be friends as a sort of test case. Incidentally, Sue and Bob send gifts to my son occasionally, and this also causes trouble. Phil says "Let him keep the gifts," but I think they should be returned, since we aren't associating. How can I make my position clear, and keep the family from interfering? Please advise. G. P.

Compulsive Envy Gnaws Aggressor

DEAR G. P.: Once bitten, twice shy, the saying goes. In all probability you are afraid to open the door to Sue, lest she stick a knife in your back a second time. And frankly I think your apprehension is justified.

I have a hunch that Sue can't be trusted to let your happiness alone, and that she would have no compunctions about sabotaging your second marriage, too, if she could undermine unity in a roundabout way.

It occurs to me that she gets afflicted with compulsive envy when your blessings seem to equal or exceed hers; and that she feels an itch, when you're doing well, to tear you down to a "dispossessed" status again—so that she may feel superior, rich and complacent in comparison. She had no time for you when making off with your first husband's scalp, thus her "poor Sue" blandishments nowadays leave me cold.

Woman's Caution Seems Justified

HER CALL at your door with Bob was strictly brassy, and her gifts to your child are sucker-bait. Maybe she kids herself that she wants forgiveness and a chance to atone, but your intuition is perfectly sound—she's no friend of yours.

She wants to get next to your life again and pull more rival play for supremacy, I think; therefore your defensive position seems sound, and I hope I've made clear to the family that her pushy agitation deserves no support. If she were sincerely contrite, she would be humbly quiet about the rift she induced. M. H.

Child Should Be Taught to Manage Money

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When Timmy was handed a dime for his weekly allowance he was vastly disappointed. Heretofore, he had been given 10 pennies and they seemed to have so much larger potentialities for spending.

Whether it be a dime or 10 pennies, the child able to count and eager to spend should have a weekly or bi-weekly allowance, which is his to do with as he pleases.

Children have to learn to manage money and there is no time so profitable as the years when money can be managed in pennies and not in dollars.

Perhaps there is little that can be done with pennies—but one candy bar or two, a paper balloon, trivial toys—but it is by the selection and buying of these that the child learns what money will do.

Learning about money is a lifetime task which some people never accomplish. If they do not, it is because someone has always managed for them, supplying them with money and adding to it when it runs out. That is not learning to manage but learning to be a spendthrift.

All children run to the store as soon as they receive their allowance and turn it over for merchandise. But this phase is not everlasting. It is a necessary one which leads naturally into the next phase, which is to save from week to week to buy something too large to purchase with 10 pennies. The next stage is to save for some far distant objective. The child has to go through all of these and he cannot be rushed into them by the parent who is eager to begin saving, before the child has ever known the joys and the frustrations of spending.

In order for that weekly allowance to be a good teaching tool it has to be a predictable sum, it has to be given regularly and it has to be managed by the child. It can't be too large a sum as that makes it unnecessary to manage it, it can't be too small as that only thwarts the child's desires and provides no experience in spending.

All of this is serious business, when we consider the importance of money management in the world today. It can't be avoided because it is easier to give the child what he wants; nor can it be avoided by giving him nothing. It has to be faced by the parent as realistically as the child must accept his obligation to learn what money will and will not do.

Salmon Surprise

A saucy red coating baked right on a salmon loaf gives it fresh appeal for the family. It's easy to prepare using catsup for the sauce.

Include the salmon juice from the can in your loaf. It adds taste, minerals and vitamins too. For the best texture blend the ingredients with a light hand.

Salmon Loaf Surprise

1 pound can pink salmon
1 egg, slightly beaten
½ cup canned condensed cream of celery soup
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup catsup

Heat oven to 375 degrees F. (moderate). Flake salmon in bowl. Add salmon juice and egg to soup; mix in onion and lemon juice. Combine lightly with bread crumbs and salmon. Shape into loaf or bake in loaf pan 7½ by 4x2 inches at 375 degrees F. for 1 hour. At the end of 30 minutes spread catsup over top of loaf and finish baking. Make six servings.

With this salmon loaf you might serve baked potatoes with parsley butter, green beans, pineapple and pecan salad, snow pudding with rolled cookies, milk and coffee.

Cooking Cues . . .

Small-size fresh onion rings and pimento-stuffed olives makes attractive toppings for miniature meat loaves that a family will enjoy.

Always bake pastry in a hot oven if you want a flaky crust.

How to Rid Suit of 'Glossy Shine'

I have a blue "unfinished wool worsted" suit that I had steamed pressed to keep it from getting shiny. This seemed to shrink it a little. How should I have it cleaned to keep it from getting a glossy shine? W. B.

As I understand it, you do not want to continue having your suit steam pressed because you are afraid it will continue to shrink. Woolens do most of their shrinking the first time they are steam pressed,—they may show slight shrinkage at the second steam pressing, but after that there will be none if the material is of good quality. So, you can feel perfectly free to have the suit steam pressed to prevent glossy shine, for that is the best method to do it.

I have a new grey suede bag that rubs off onto anything it brushes against. It blackens my white coat and whitens dark clothing. Is there anything that can be done to it to prevent this? C. S.

I am told by a leather repairman that the color of even the finest suedes will wear off some, but there is a commercial treatment which will at least partially correct the trouble. I suggest you discuss your problem with a leather repairman. One firm doing this work can be reached by calling Executive 0961.

My iron is marked rayon, silk, wool, cotton and linen. Can you give me the temperature of each? To set textile paints the directions call for a 350-degree F. heat and I am at a loss to know just where to set the heat control on my iron. P. C. P.

To get a 350-degree heat, set your iron at silk. Here are the approximate temperatures for the other settings: rayon, 200 to 300 degrees F.; wool, 300 to 350 degrees F.; cotton, 400 to 450 degrees F.; linen 450 to 500 degrees F.

Can you advise me how to clean a beaded hand bag? It is white with a floral decoration of red roses and green leaves. The bag is about 15 years old and has recently been relined with a green material, perhaps rayon. C. W. E.

The only thing that can be done, with safety, to clean the bag is to dust it with a cleaning powder or a corn starch into which only enough carbon tetrachloride has been mixed to make it damp. Allow the powder or starch to remain on the bag for 10 to 15 minutes and then gently brush it out with a soft brush. This treatment can be repeated as long as you see improvement. The same method can be used on the lining.

What is the best method of destroying and preventing moths in closets? I have tried crystals, which did not seem to keep for long. I have heard there is a spray which gives protection for about six months, but I do not know the name. Also, I live in an apartment house where clothes, etc. cannot be aired outside. R. S. H.

Spraying the walls, baseboards, and floors of the closet with a 5 per cent DDT solution will kill moths coming in contact with it for several months. Before the spraying is done, everything should be removed from the closet so that all the DDT can penetrate cracks along baseboards, closet shelves, etc. While the clothes are out of the closet, they should be thoroughly sprayed with a good moth preventive before being returned. There are several excellent products on the market for this, including one which renders fabrics proof from moths for several years. Soiled clothes should be dry cleaned to kill the moth larvae which may be present. Clothes not in constant use should be sealed in moth-proof garment bags after they are sprayed.

If you have any woolens stored in the closet in boxes these should be taken out, sprayed, and the box sprayed. When all are dry, return the woolens to the box and place a cup of moth preventive crystals in the box before closing it tightly.

PETUNIA!

I add the raisins,
Blend and mix
. . . But as they bake
They sink like bricks.

But they wouldn't, Petunia, if you'd warm the raisins thoroughly in the oven before you add them to the batter. Try it!

N. Y. Democrats File FCC Protest On Time Refusal

New York, May 15 (NYHT).—Refusal of the Columbia Broadcasting System to grant to the Democratic State Committee free air time to answer a "political address" by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey has led to a formal protest to the Federal Communications Commission.

Paul E. Fitzpatrick, State Democratic chairman, disclosed today that he had complained of the CBS position in a letter sent Saturday to Wayne Coy, FCC chairman, at the agency's Washington headquarters.

"I consider this speech political in nature, Fitzpatrick's letter said, "containing at least seven statements of a controversial nature, and at least one false statement detrimental to the Democratic Party in the State of New York."

Delivered by the Governor on the evening of May 2, the quarter-hour talk was broadcast State-wide by CBS. The Republicain Governor summarized his views on the work of the 1949 session of the Republican-controlled Legislature. He has made such talks in past years.

Racial Hearing Set Tuesday for 5 Brotherhoods

By the United Press

Officials of five railroad brotherhoods are scheduled to go before a House Labor Subcommittee Tuesday to defend themselves against the old charge that they discriminate against Negro railway employes.

The dispute dates back more than five years when some 20 railroads and the brotherhoods defied an order by the late President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee directing them to stop discriminatory practices.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr., Negro chairman of the subcommittee, summoned the presidents of the five brotherhoods before his group and threatened them with subpenas if they failed to answer. The subcommittee is considering a bill to set up a permanent fair employment practices commission.

Albany Reporters On State Payroll, Chicago News Says

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—The Chicago Daily News said yesterday three newspaper reporters at Albany, N. Y., have been drawing pay for part-time New York State jobs.

The Daily News said the reporters and their total State earnings are:

Raymon I. Borst, Buffalo Evening News, $10,770; Leo W. O'Brien, Albany Times-Union and International News Service, $4440, and John C. Crary, New York Sun, $2300.

None of the three was available for comment.

The Daily News said that "at the Buffalo Evening News it was explained that some time ago Borst was asked to choose between his newspaper job and his State position. He agreed then to submit his resignation from the Hudson River Regulating District Board."

The paper said O'Brien is secretary and Crary treasurer of the Albany Port District Commission—that O'Brien has been on the commission since 1935 and Crary since 1945.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

When Stores Make Exit There Will Be An Entrance

As you've walked past the Kass Realty Company's new building now taking shape on 14th st., between G and New York ave., have you ever stopped to wonder where the entrance is going to be?

I'll confess that I'm not that observant. The thought never occurred to me until Harry Wender, chairman of the D. C. Recreation Board, suggested it.

"They're putting up a fine new building," mused Harry, "but I'll be doggone if I can figure how they plan to get in and out of it. They've forgotten to make an entrance."

But Builder Garfield Kass just smiles when you pop the question. Apparently he's heard it before.

"The leases of two stores expire on May 19," he explains. "The next day, when the camera store and news stand have moved out, we'll start building an entrance."

Meantime most of the building has been completed without the loss of rental revenue from the two tenants. Pretty clever, eh?

SUGGESTION

Two Government gals called up yesterday to make the same suggestion. (Maybe it's a plot to make a lot of work for me.)

The girls suggest that the best way to refute Mary Van Renssalaer Thayer's list of "12 Most Handsome Men in Washington" is to invite District Liners to pick a better dozen. They say:

"We, too, are weary of seeing 'lists' composed of famous names only—and selected by other well-known headliners. It's time the rest of us took a hand. So why not invite average citizens to send in snapshots of their non-famous friends, and then pick the 12 most handsome of them, to show Mrs. Thayer that good looks are not confined to big-shots?"

I dunno—why not? If I can talk the city editor out of a couple of columns of news space, those snapshots of handsome men might give our Government Girls something to take their minds off the appropriations cuts proposed on Capitol Hill.

ACCIDENTS GOING SOMEPLACE TO HAPPEN

It's easy to understand why Mrs. D. M. Womack of Georgia Hall, Arlington, Va., is perplexed about an incident she witnessed on Route 1, south of Alexandria. But it's not so easy to figure out a good solution to the problem.

While driving along the highway Mrs. Womack saw three speeding cars "playing tag" and racing each other—meantime swerving from lane to lane, and creating a dangerous hazard for every other car on the road.

Apparently these were three friends, "having fun." They weren't actually in a hurry to get someplace; they were just playing.

Mrs. Womack jotted down the license numbers, and thought she'd report this dangerous "game" to the police. But the cops just shrugged.

"Can you positively identify the drivers?" they asked. Obviously the answer was "no."

"Then there isn't much we can do. You can't make a court case without identification."

No, you can't. What's more, there aren't enough policemen available to chase after every erratic driver who is reported.

But it does seem a pity that there isn't some way to crack down on these motorized cowboys.

It's bad enough that they stand a good chance of killing themselves with such antics; but what I'm even more concerned about is that they might kill you or me.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two gray-striped female kittens, eight weeks old." (Randolph 8088 after 6:30 p. m.)

"Lovely young Maltese and white mother cat; expecting; must have large yard." (Wisconsin 4395.)

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

The other day on my WTOP radio program (10 a. m.—advt.) I was talking to Dr. Harold Bischoff of Children's Hospital.

Dr. Bischoff warned parents that this is the season of the year when they must be on the lookout for ticks which cause Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

I mentioned that one method of getting the ticks to let loose was to burn them off with a cigarette.

But Mary Lewis of Arlington, Va., informs me that there's a much easier way to get the ticks off. She recommends ordinary household ammonia.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

You recently wrote: ". . . she sat herself down and wrote a letter."

Shouldn't you have used "set"? "Sat" is an intransitive verb, and does not take an object. "Set" is a transitive verb and must have an object.

Fran Morriss
F-119 Nebraska Hall
Arlington Farms, Va.

Dear Fran:

Stop scaring me. Until I looked at page 2349 of my Webster, I though you were right.

"Sit" is listed first as an intransitive verb, but then also as a transitive verb. Thus:

"To seat (oneself); often with 'down'."

If that doesn't convince you, I can plead that it's idiomatic. Back where I come from, everybody uses the phrase.

Bill

P. S.: Are they still planning to evict all you gals, or have you talked them out of it?

'Hill' Has 'Socialized Medicine'

By Drew Pearson

They don't want it advertised, but the same Senators and Congressmen who balk at voting a health program for others are accepting "socialized medicine" for themselves.

PEARSON

Their aches and pains are treated by a Government doctor whose fees are paid by the taxpayers. He is Dr. George W. Calver of the Navy, who guards over the health of the Nation's lawmakers.

Ever since two Congressmen died of heart attacks in 1928, Dr. Calver not only has kept an office on Capitol Hill, but serves as "family doctor" to members of Congress.

Twice a year, he also sends Congressmen out to Bethesda Naval Hospital for complete laboratory tests. All the bills, except prescriptions for medicine, are charged to the taxpayers—though the laboratory fees alone would cost $150 at a private hospital.

In case of serious illness, members of Congress are admitted to Army and Navy hospitals. They pay $9.75 per day—slightly more than it would cost them to stay home, and about one-third what it would cost at a private hospital. Yet this small fee covers doctor bills, nurse service and even surgery.

Meanwhile, the Senators and Congressmen who receive all this medical pampering have bottled up the President's health program which would offer similar benefits to the American people.

For anyone except Congressmen, the doctors' lobby would call this "socialized medicine."

Not only the lawmakers but their staffs can go to Dr. Calver for treatment. His office handles approximately 60,000 patient-visits each year—a full-time job not only for Dr. Calver but also an assistant doctor, nine nurses and three Navy enlisted men.

Note—Though no longer with the Navy, Dr. Calver still draws a rear admiral's pay.

Sam's Alleged Friend

President Truman is still waiting to learn whether handsome Curtis Calder, chairman of the giant Electric Bond & Share holding corporation, is going to accept the post of Secretary of the Army. Meanwhile, Congressmen recall Calder as a friendly lobbyist seen around Capitol Hill during the days of the holding corporation fight, but who actually didn't know the big shots as well as he imagined.

Calder was fond of telling people how he and Speaker Sam Rayburn were bosom pals.

"I just dropped in on Sam," Calder told Ganson Purcell, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. "We've been friends for years. You know, I am from Texas, too."

A day or so later Chairman Purcell bumped into Speaker Rayburn himself.

"Say," said Rayburn, "who is that fellow from Electric Bond & Share? He was around to see me the other day. What's his name? He claims to be from Texas—though, as a matter of fact, he comes from Kansas. I never can remember his name."

"Do you mean Calder?" prompted Purcell.

"Oh, yes, that's it," replied Rayburn. "He claims we knew each other back in Texas."

A few weeks later Chairman Purcell happened to meet Rayburn again and once again the Speaker asked the name of his alleged friend from Texas. Again Purcell told him, and this time Rayburn wrote Calder's name down on a piece of paper.

But the third time Purcell bumped into Rayburn, once again the Speaker had forgotten the name of his supposedly intimate pal from Texas. Apparently they weren't such good friends after all.

Note—Rayburn took the position that the people of Texas should have a chance to own and operate their own utility companies, Calder, as head of Texas Power and Light and of Dallas Power and Light, took exactly the opposite position.

Pressmen's Clean-Up

As the AFL executive committee meets in Cleveland today, five locals of the Pressmen's Union have demanded a thorough investigation of the manner in which the late George Berry gutted the treasury of the union he was supposed to protect.

Many rank and file members of the union have petitioned AFL officials to protect their interests. Unless they get AFL aid they fear their hard-earned pension benefits will be lost, for it is extremely difficult to hold an election and throw out present union officials.

The last time such an election was held, according to Lewis W. Thomas, sr., chairman of the 1926 Recall Committee, it got nowhere. The ballots against President Berry were taken by car to Rogersville, Tenn., the union's headquarters, by a union member named Dooley.

"However," recalls Thomas, the road to Rogersville is through the Tennessee mountains and on the way, Berry's men waylaid the car and shot the tires off it. Dooley arrived at Rogersville on foot the next day.

"When he got there, Berry welcomed him in a very sorrowful voice. 'Why, Brother Dooley,' he said, you are late. We counted the ballots yesterday. I am terribly sorry but we can't count yours—under the bylaws.'"

Members of the union claim they probably wouldn't have much more luck today holding a recall action against the present leaders of the union.

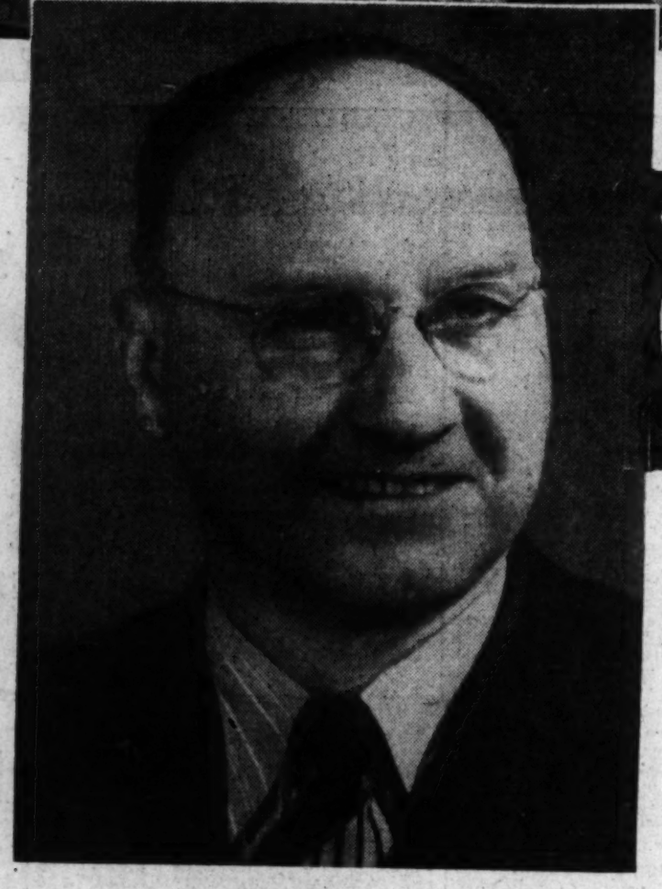
Number 15 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



VINCENT TESKE, Supervisor of our truck Maintenance Garage, wears an infectious smile with his gleaming white coveralls. He has been with The Hecht Co. 13 years and has been working with trucks and automobiles for the past 33 years. At home Mr. Teske is chief handyman, taking care of all mechanical work around his Northeast Washington house. After a day's work with large trucks and trailers . . . Mr. Teske makes miniature wood carvings . . . probably to adjust his perspective . . . but mostly for his own enjoyment.

We Keep 'em Rolling . . .

SAYS VINCENT TESKE, SUPERVISOR OF THE HECHT CO.'S TRUCK MAINTENANCE GARAGE

Sparks fly! An acetylene torch burns through a half-inch piece of steel! Shadows of machines and men dance in the weird purple-white light of electro-welding! The guts of a motor are pulled out and new parts take their place! A truck body is completely rebuilt! These are some of the activities constantly taking place in our 7,500-square-foot truck maintenance garage. These are some of the things Mr. Teske has to supervise in order to keep our fleet of delivery trucks in A-1 condition. The delivery system of a big store demands well-oiled, trouble-free equipment . . . and it's "Teske's task," as we call it, to keep 'em rolling. The Hecht Co. knows that the shortest distance between two purchases depends in great part upon the efficiency of our delivery system. Of course, a truck or van will break down now and then . . . the delivery of that bedroom suite you purchased is unavoidably delayed. That's why The Hecht Co. is always applying more manpower, top mechanical knowledge . . . placing more stress on preventive maintenance.

Let's examine some of the operations necessary to keep our fleet of 83 vans, trucks, trailers, and station wagons in top mechanical condition. A fleet of trucks that cover enough mileage in and around Washington to be able to go around the world more than four times in one month. Every 4,000 miles, each piece of equipment is brought in for a complete check. Since a truck covers an average of 1,248 miles a month, this would place each vehicle in the shop every three months. In an average year our trucks consume over 117,000 gallons of gasoline, 3,600 pounds of various types of grease, 9,600 quarts of oil. The shop also has its own parts department. Should a truck break down because of a worn out fuel pump or a faulty carburetor . . . the new part can be rushed from our own parts shop and the truck repaired in a matter of minutes. "Preventive maintenance . . . thorough, expert repair work," says Mr. Teske, "keep our delivery trucks running smoothly . . . get the things you buy at The Hecht Co. to your homes as quickly as possible." All this equipment goes a long way to make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop.
